Ancient Rule Used as Curb On Opponents Of Court Bill

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate manual, a forbidding, matter-of-fact volume of seldom-used rules and orders, yesterday became a vital document in the Administration's fight to force court bill passage, as the Senate was enjoined to abide by the letter of its own law.

The rule book was shaken from its dusty shelf by an unexpected bombardment of points of order and appeals to the chair. They marked a surprise Administration move to block a filibuster that has not yet started.

It was only the third day of debate on the one-judge-a-year substitute for the President's court bill. The third speaker for the measure still had the floor. He was closely beleaguered by opposition questioning, and some of their points were beginning to tell.

The speaker was Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, one of the framers of the substitute plan. Questioning brought out that he drew no distinction between the "letter and the spirit" of the Constitution, and he hoped the court bill would bring about an altered construction of the Constitution.

Logan was so closely beset by the opposition that he made little headway on his actual speech, when Senate Majority Leader Robinson arose with the first point of order. He said a Senator having the floor "may not yield tto other Senators for speeches within his time," but only for a question. He asked the chair to rule.

Then ensued such a volley of protests from the opposition, more points of order from Robinson, and points of personal privilege from court-bill opponents as has seldom been heard in that usually decorous chamber.

But it all ended, as the leadership had intended, in a series of rulings by the President Pro Tem of the Senate, Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, that if followed to the letter will work havoc with a filibuster. In a word, Pittman said the Senate must follow rules it uses now only for decorative purposes.

Interruptions Barred.

They are:

No Senator may permit interruption except for a question.

No Senator may speak more than twice on the same subject in the same "legislative day," which means until the court bill is disposed of.

And no other business may be transacted except by unanimous consent.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, liberal leader of the opposition, immediately slapped back with a warning of his own. So long as the Senate's nose is held to the court bill grindstone, without intervening adjournments, he declared his intention to object to all unanimous-consent requests for the transaction of other business.

Refuses to "Swap."

The stand of both sides in the controversy means that other measures, including the District tax bill and the wages and hours legislation reported yesterday, will be sidetracked until the court fight is out of the way.

"There is a fight on both bills," Robinson later told reporters. "We are not going to swap one fight for another."

Robinson's move to cut off the opposition cross-fire came after Wheeler had risen to protest Logan's assertion he had turned his back on causes he formerly championed.

Robinson said Wheeler was not asking a question, and demanded a ruling from the chair. Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, Senator Millard F. Tydings, of Maryland, and Wheeler turned furiously on Robinson.

Johnson said the rule was "violated every day." Tydings said a Senator "attacked by another" should be permitted to reply.

"In all decency," said Wheeler, "I have the right to correct the statement which was made against me."

Frenzied French Finance, Causing Estimates of a 40-Billion-Franc Deficit in 1937.

By Felix Morley.
No. 18 in a Series.

Copyright, 1937, The Washington Post.

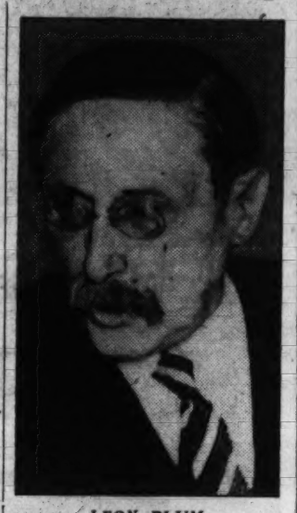
PARIS, June 27.—There is little doubt anywhere regarding the theoretical desirability of the social reform program which was put into effect in France during the year in which Premier Blum held office. Criticism concentrates on the fact that no way other than deficit financing has yet been found to cover the costs of the program.

M. Blum resigned on June 21 without offering any suggestions on the subject, thereby strengthening the general conviction that he had no solution. The new premier, Camille Chautemps, cannot dodge the issue.

Either he must find more straw, in the shape of greatly increased revenues, or the bricks of which the social reform program is built will rapidly crumble.

Of course the staggering heritage of debt which Premier Chautemps inherits was not primarily of M. Blum's making. The war piled up enormous obligations and successive post-war governments have continued to pyramid the debt higher, spreading its weight more heavily over the people as a whole. Two devaluations of the currency, in 1926 and 1936, have wiped out a large proportion of individual savings without appreciably halting the trend towards national bankruptcy.

What Blum did was to force the issue—for his successor—by accelerating the pace of prodigal spending. In 1935 the internal debt of the French government increased by something over 19,000,000,000 francs.



LEON BLUM.

In 1936, for the last half of which Blum was premier, the increase was almost 26,000,000,000, of which something over one quarter was covered by the devaluation profit. Conservative estimates for the 1937 debt increase, made just prior to Blum's resignation, were running to over

France Decrees Heavy Taxes to Balance Budget

Bonnet Orders Profits of Gold Speculators Confiscated.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 8.—The Council of Ministers, calling for sacrifices to curb France's financial ills, tonight decreed a series of new taxes calculated to balance the 1937 regular budget at a single stroke.

The sweeping decree was signed by President Albert Lebrun after it was presented to him by Finance Minister Georges Bonnet, who was called back from his ambassadorial post in Washington in June to overcome the country's financial troubles.

Bonnet announced the taxes are intended to yield 10,500,000,000 francs ($405,300,000), of which 8,000,000,000 would be used to eliminate a deficit in the regular budget and 2,500,000,000 would be turned over to the railways, losses of which the government has paid.

The finance minister declared the government, fighting speculation and trying to protect the franc, decided to seize the profits of speculaters who bought foreign exchange and gold between June 10 and June 30, when the franc was in danger.

An increase of 20 per cent in income taxes on revenue above 20,000 francs ($772) a year, measures to "soak the rich," action against tax evasions and increases in indirect taxes on stamps, telephones, tobacco and other articles also will be effected, Bonnet said.

The 8,000,000,000-franc deficit in the regular budget is only a part of the government's financial difficulty. The combined treasury deficit of both ordinary and extraordinary expeditures for 1937 has been estimated at about 36,127,000,000 francs (roughly $1,600,000,000).

Troyanovsky, Wife To Embark Today On Trip to Russia

Alexander Troyanovsky, the First Ambassador to the United States from the Soviet Union, will sail on the Ile de France today with Mrs. Troyanovsky for Russia.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday stated that this Government would give serious and intensive study to the British plan for partitioning Palestine into three parts, as formally announced in London on Wednesday. Copies of the British Royal Report on Palestine arrived at the State Department yesterday.

Whether this Government will raise any objections to the proposed partitioning of Palestine depends on the outcome of the study now being made. Meanwhile from some Jewish quarters in this country the State Department is under pressure to assert its rights, under a treaty with Great Britain of December 3, 1924, to object to the proposed changes in the Palestine mandate.

Although it is generally assumed that the mandate over Palestine—which includes provisions for establishment of a national home for Jews—is exclusively a matter between Great Britain and the League of Nations, the United States Government has been a party to this undertaking ever since the end of the World War. Even though this country did not ratify the Versailles Treaty and remained outside of the League of Nations, it insisted in the early twenties on being a party to the Palestine arrangements.

In 1922 Congress adopted a resolution, closely paralleling the Balfour Declaration of 1917. The resolution of the American Congress stated:

"That the United States of America favors the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of Christian and all other non-Jewish communities in Palestine, and that the holy places and religious buildings and sites in Palesttine shall be adequately protected."

Before and after this action was taken the State Department engaged in dispatching a series of notes insisting that the United States should be consulted regarding terms of the mandate for Palestine.

There followed a lengthy period

Naval Planes, Ships Renew EarhartHunt

Safe Landing Possible for Pair in Islands, Experts Think.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, July 8.—Fighting planes and ships spread fanwise through the Phoenix Island region today in a determined search for Amelia Earhart, now missing for six full days.

Three planes catapulted into the air from the battleship Colorado for their second sweep over Winslow Reef, southeast of Howland Island, land dot in the Pacific which Miss Earhart missed on her attempted world flight. They returned tonight without clews.

The Coast Guard cutter Itasca searched islets, reefs and shoals south of Howland and westward of the Phoenix group. The Navy minesweeper Swan searched east of Howland.

Although the Navy reported no developments in the day's search at 3 p. m. (E. S. T.), hopes of friends and relatives persisted despite the fact that Miss Earhart and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan, have been lost since last Friday.

Lexington Refueling.

The $40,000,000 aircraft carrier Lexington reached Lahaina Roads, near her, at 4:40 p. m. (E. S. T.), completing a 2,500-mile run from San Diego in 92 hours, 40 mnutes. She prepared for quick refueling and another 1,500-mile race to Howland to reinforce the hunt with her great air fleet.

From Pearl Harbor the aircraft tender Avocet moved into Lahaina Roads to supply the Lexington with aviation gasoline.

The Colorado's planes first sought a sand bank supposedly lying 45 miles north of Winslow Reef. Some searchers theorized this bank might have offered a haven for the fliers when they came down last Friday somewhere near Howland, their goal on a 2,570-mile flight from New Guinea.

In a two-hour 20-minute flight yesterday the Colorado's planes failed to find the sand bank, listed as of "doubtful position."

The immediate searching area reached as far as Enderbury and Canton islands of the Phoenix group, which centers about 280 miles southwest of Howland.

The Colorado did not report its own progress, but was believed to be about 150 miles south of the Equator.

Ships Form Triangle.

At 10:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) the Itasca reported its position as about 90 miles south southwest of Howland and heading westward in partly cloudy weather with visibility about 1,000 yards.

From the positions of the three ships it appeared they had started to diverge somewhere near Howland and deployed until they represented the points of a great triangle.

Naval authorities said the search would be extended southward tomorrow until the entire area of possibility has been covered. Then, if the search proved fruitless, the Lexington's planes would comb the area again.

Rear Admiral O. G. Murfin, fourteenth district Naval commandant and search director, previously said he believed next Monday would determine whether Miss Earhart was dead or alive because the Lexington probably would throw its full forces into the hunt then.

Murfin is one of the many experts who believe that if Miss Earhart's plane is found, it will be on one of the reefs or islands around the Phoenix group.

Indian TribeWants Museum to Return Rain-Making Skull

The Gros Ventres Indians of western North Dakota asked the Indian Office yesterday to help them recover the sacred skull of their thunder bird from the Heye Foundation Museum in New York.

Legend says the thunder bird promised the Gros Ventres that as long as they kept his skull rain never would fail them nor would they suffer want.

Severe droughts and grasshopper plagues in recent years reminded the older members of the tribe of the promise. They failed to persuade the museum to return the "sacred bundle," acquired when the tribal custodian embraced Christianity.

Power to Fix WagesTaken From Board

Senate Gets Measure; Black Urges Quick Passage.

Bill Altered to Meet Employer-Labor Objections.

By Sidney Olson.

Wielding the committee scissors like a surgeon's shears, the Senate Labor Committee yesterday cut the Black-Connery wages-hours bill wide open, extracted and discarded the vast discretionary powers it would have vested in a board, and sewed it up with a series of small amendments that smoothed over all committee differences.

Then the committee reported it favorably to the Senate floor, while Chairman Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, asked that it pass this session in order to "keep the party's 1936 platform promise."

Ironclad "Roof."

Instead of "floor" levels for wages and hours, the new bill presents an ironclad "roof" of 40 cents an hour as the national minimum wage and 40 hours per week as the national work week.

Above these levels, the Fair Labor Standards Board, to bet set up under the act, may not operate. In that realm collective bargaining will take over. In this respect the changed measure meets the almost unanimous insistence of nearly all the industrialists and labor leaders who appeared in open hearings that the section either be junked or materially modified.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, fought this section and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, sought its drastic amendment. Industrialists almost without exception assailed it.

The new measure exempts seamen, all railroad men, except the lower paid, such as maintenance-of-way men; fishermen, all agricultural workers, professional men and executives, and adds an unexpected new group to the exempted workers—employes of local retailers. Some observers, startled at this addition, agreed in the off-hand reaction that this exemption would affect many hundreds of thousands of workers.

Definitions Omitted.

Definitions of "labor organization" and "labor dispute" have been omitted. The old definition of "labor organization" had included "any organization of any kind," including company unions. "Labor dispute" had included any controversy "regardless of whether the disputants stand in the proximate relation of employer-employe."

Definitions of "oppressive work week" and "oppressive wage" in the original bill contained a blank space, wherein Congress was to insert the agreed figures, subject to board orders. The new bill merely defines oppressive wages and oppressive work weeks as those in which employes work longer or for less money than the figures declared later in the bill—40 cents an hour and 40 hours per week.

The definition of "oppressive labor practice" in the former bill, classifying such as including the employment of strikebreakers and labor spies, has been dropped.

New exemptions were added to the definition of "oppressive child labor." Agricultural workers are excepted from the prohibition against employment under 16 years of age, and a parent or guardian is allowed to employ his child. Parents are also exempted from the clause prohibiting hazardous employment under the age of 18 years.

Permits Exemptions.

The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor is further allowed to grant exemptions to child-labor employers at occupations and at times which do not interfere with school or health.

Completely and drastically revamped, the new section 4 contains the unobjected-to essentials of the old sections 4 and 5. It contains in its body the amendment suggested by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, according to a statement released by Walsh's office last night.

In essence, the amendment seeks the elemination of substandard wages and hours from interstate industry, but in fear that such an "abrupt change" might "do serious injury" to industry and workers, the act will seek its results "cau-

Seattle Newspaper To Reopen in Face Of Guild Walkout

Seattle, July 8 (AP).—Police Inspector George H. Comstock cancelled all police leaves, furloughs and vacations tonight in preparation for assisting the management of the strike-bound Seattle Star to resume publication early tomorrow.

"We're going to be ready for any emergency," he said. The American Newspaper Guild called a strike Saturday after a jurisdictional dispute with the teamsters union over circulation employes' union affiliation.

The Star's guild unit, through City Editor Paul Ewing, said the guild picket line might be withdrawn entirely tomorrow to prevent "broken heads," and the strikers then might depend on friendly unions to prevent the Star publishing by refusing to handle its papers and newsprint supplies.

The Scripps league of newspapers, through Chairman E. W. Scripps, confirmed acceptance today of the resignation of Rod L. Brink as editor in chief. Brink and Scripps declined to comment, but the guild unit, through Jack Heise, chairman, stated the resignation was due to the Star's decision to reopen the plant.

Repeal of Marriage Clause Brings Joy

There was joy aplenty in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll F. Rhodes last night, when news came that the House had voted to repeal the marriage clause. Four years and a day ago (July 7, 1933), the clause boosted Mrs. Rhodes out of a $2,900 job in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Her husband was an attorney with the Federal Trade Commission. They fought her ouster in the courts, but lost. The Rhodes live at 3430 Brown street northwest.

Five Felled by Heat as Mercury Soars to 94.7 for Year's Record

Prospects of Showers for Today Offer Little Hope for Relief; 27 Dead as Torrid Wave Grips East and Midwest.

A blistering heat wave seared Washington yesterday, sending the temperature to its high mark for the summer, prostrating at least six men and women and driving sweltering thousands to the parks and river banks for relief as the sun set and a gentle, hot wind puffed through the city.

The record reading was 94.7 at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

As District residents mopped perspiring brows, the Weather Bureau gave slight hope of relief. Today, the forecaster said, will be fair, with little change in temperature, although there may be thundershowers some time this afternoon.

Among yesterday's heat victims was a former resident of Alaska, Mrs. Louise Donsky, 44, of 818 North Capitol street, who has been in Washington only three months.

Mrs. Donsky was stricken in a lunchroom at Fifth and D streets northwest and was taken to Emergency Hospital. Her condition is not serious.

Margaret Pierce, 22, of 462 Maryland avenue southwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for heat prostration after she was found unconscious on the sidewalk in front of 407 Seventh street southwest.

Other victims were John W. Stover, 20, of 2423 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, who went to Georgetown Hospital; Remus Gay, Congressional Country Club, Georgetown Hospital; Albert Baumgartner, 35, of 311 D street northwest, an employe of the District Jail, treated at Gallinger Hospital, and Jerry Davis, of 212 N street northwest, Freedmen's Hospital.

Airport Report Today to Urge Maryland Site

Minority on Commission Still Favors Construction at Gravelly Point.

The final report of the Washington Airport Commission, recommending that the new landing field be located in nearby Maryland, will be submitted to the Speaker of the House and the Vice President by noon today, it was learned last night.

The commission held its final meeting, a four-hour session, yesterday noon at Senator King's office, chairman of the nine-man body.

Although members of the commission closely guarded the contents of the report, from reliable sources it was learned that the Maryland site probably at Camp Springs, will be recommended.

From another source came the report three or possibly four of the nine members will not sign the recommendation. These probably will hold out for Gravelly Point.

Fliers' Ultimatum.

The commission's session yesterday morning followed the sensational development that fliers, taking 14 and 21 passenger Douglas planes in and out of the Washington terminal, finally had refused to use the present landing field except when weather conditions were perfect. They announced they no longer would fly in and out of the present field after a 60-day period had elapsed, except when wind con-

Robinson Bars Senate Study Of D.C. Tax Bill

Threatened with indefinite delay in Senate action on the District tax bill, and with funds running short, the Commissioners today will meet to ask Congress for authority to obtain emergency loans from the Federal Treasury.

Despite the fact that no enabling act has been passed to collect funds to finance the District Government, Majority Leader Robinson last night refused to allow time for Senate consideration of the omnibus District tax bill.

Because of its controversial provisions, Robinson said, there was no good reason for putting aside one argumentative bill, that is, the Supreme Court reform measure, for another of less importance.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who is in charge of the tax bill, said he knew of no solution to the dilemma. He said he has impressed upon Senator Robinson the fiscal plight of the District.

"It is, indeed, an unhappy situation," he said, "but I don't know what more we can do about it now."

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, upon being informed of the Senate leaders' decision by The Post, said that he would propose to the Board of Commissioners today that they ask Congress to pass a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of

Cancer Experts Laud Congress For Proposals to Fight Disease

Medical authorities representing America's leading research laboratories, universities and hospitals yesterday acclaimed the merits of bills which would authorize the Federal Government to throw its support behind efforts to learn more about and to control cancer—which they termed the Nation's biggest health problem and its second greatest killer.

Among 14 witnesses heard at a joint all-day meeting of the Senate and House Commerce committees, held to determine the medical profession's reaction to measures introduced by Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, and Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, only one dissented to the proposals.

Dr. Olin West, secretary and field manager of the American Medical Association, stated the opinion of his organization that for the Government to subsidize cancer study and treatment to the extent called for in the bills would "overbalance the whole public-health program" and discourage initiative by private individuals and institutions.

The Bone measure asks an annual grant of $1,000,000 to be used under direction of the U. S. Public Health Service. The Maverick measure calls for an extra expenditure of $1,400,000 for the erection and equipment of a 100-bed hospital, where laboratory findings would be tested.

Dr. Francis Carter Wood, director of the Crocker Institute of Cancer Research, Columbia University, voiced objection of several of the

America's 27,000 Jamboree Boy Scouts said their farewell to the Nation's Capital last night in a stirring arena show which closed, as far as the public is concerned, the first national assembly in the 27-year history of their organization.

Earlier in the day they had staged their grand national review for President Roosevelt, climax of the ten-day encampment, and this noon the exodus will begin. Five thousand will be homeward bound by nightfall and the last contingent will have departed by Monday.

Witnessed by 25,000 spectators, who sat enthralled through the three hours of pageantry and closing campfire ritual, the sixth and final episode of "Cavalcade of Scouting" was built up to a grand finale in which practically the entire "little army" was gathered in the Monument Grounds for the last salute.

Weary though they were from the forenoon review in a blazing sun, the cast of 3,000 boys from eight Western States and Hawaii rallied gallantly to depict the winning of the West and demonstrate their scouting prowess.

Representatives of the 25 foreign nations at the Jamboree and the 800 American youths bound for the World Jamboree in Holland next month massed their colors for the concluding spectacle, in which the campfire which burned continuously during the encampment was extinguished. Its ashes will be transported to Holland to form part of the base for the international campfire.

Another feature of the display was the presentation of Eagle badges to 33 Boy Scouts from the Far West by Dr. James E. West, Chief Scout Executive.

Still another highlight of the windup program was "Uncle Dan" Beard's presentation to Dr. West of the American flag which flew over general headquarters during the Jamboree. The emblem will fly over the Americans' encampment in Holland.

Standing for nearly two hours in the sizzling rays of the forenoon sun, the khaki-clad youths assembled here from every State and 25 foreign countries were inspected

House Votes For Repeal of U. S. Workers Marriage Ban

Family Pay Limit, Substitute Killed

Women Representatives Cause Downfall; Senate Accord Forecast.

By James D. Secrest.

Outright repeal of section 213 of the 1932 economy act, widely known as the "marriage clause," was voted yesterday by the House in a parliamentary somersault.

The Civil Service Committee had reported the Celler bill with an amendment restricting the combined salaries of a family from the Federal Government to $4,000, in the case of new appointments, and it was for this measure the Rules Committee granted a special rule.

A more complete victory was won by foes of section 213, however, that they had expected, and as a direct result of efforts of defenders of the "marriage clause" to extend its application and to "put teeth into it."

Led by Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, self-styled "villain" in the drama," opponents of repeal rallied votes for a substitute amendment, which sought to strengthen rather than repeal section 213.

Amendment Defeated.

The repeal bill was passed by a vote of 203 to 129, while the Cochran amendment was defeated, 203 to 138.

Because the Cochran amendment was adopted in committee of the whole and defeated on a roll call vote in the full House, the committee amendment attaching a restrictive rider on combined incomes was deleted along with its substitute.

The House, by this odd action, reversed itself on a motion made by Representative Boileau, of Wisconsin, floor leader of the Progressives.

Boileau had offered an amendment in the committee of the whole to strike out the committee amendment, but his motion was voted down. As the bill emerged from the afternoon's session, however, it was in the exact form the Progressive leader had asked.

Measure to Senate.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, already has introduced a similar bill for repeal. Indications are the House action will be sustained.

Constituting the last major provision of the 1923 economy act, section 213 has furnished material for fiction writers, resolutions for numerous women's organizations, campaign arguments for members of Congress and a plank for the Republican platform.

Since its enactment 1,835 Government employes have been dismissed, according to Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, and 80 per cent of these have been women.

Th law provided that, whenever dismissals were necessary within the classified Civil Service agencies for reasons of economy, husbands or wives should be dropped first, providing both were employed by the Federal Government.

Women Heckle Males.

Women members of the House had a field day as they forgot party differences and combined their talents in heckling male members who de-

Myron C. Taylor Reported Seeking Diplomatic Post

New York, July 8 (AP).—The New York Herald Tribune said tonight Myron C. Taylor expects to retire as chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation by the end of this year.

This is contingent on the completion of a financing and common stock dividend resumption program. If this program is not carried through he will continue as chairman until July 1, 1938.

The paper continued: "It is scarcely a secret in Wall Street that Mr. Taylor would be available for appointment as Ambassador to the Court of St. James, if Robert W. Bingham should resign."

of negotiations concluding with such a treaty being signed on December 3, 1924, by Frank B. Kellogg, then American Ambassador in London and Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary. Ratifications of the treaty were exchanged exactly one year later when it became effective.

The purpose of the treaty was to assure most-favored nation treatment for Americans in the mandated territory and to guarantee to Americans the right to establish and maintain educational, philanthropic and religious institutions in the mandated territory, to receive voluntary applicants and to teach English.

The terms of the mandate granted by the League of Nations to Great Britain were incorporated as a part of this treaty and article VII of the pact provided that:

"Nothing contained in the present convention shall be affected by any modification which may be made in the terms of the mandate, as recited above, unless such modification shall have been assented to by the United States."

To Study U. S. Rights.

Thus the first part of the State Department study will be devoted to an inquiry to determine in what way the British plan might affect American rights and interests. The department also will take into consideration the representations made to it by Jewish groups in this country.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, who represents the Jewish population of New York, is opposed to the British action and has urged the State Department to insist on its right of intervention before any final action is undertaken.

"The British are treating Palestine as if it were English territory," Senator Copeland declared. "Palestine does not belong to the English . . . The pledges that were made to the world indicated that Palestine was to be made a home for the Jews.

"I am not in favor of going to war with Great Britain over the question; but I think this Government, in solemn and set terms, should make clear to the British government that it would be a violation of our treaty . . . if they should fail to take into consideration the views which we hold . . .

"I happen to live in a community where one-seventh of all the Jews of the world live . . . I know how intent they are upon this matter, how interested they are in it, how devoted they are to it . . . It is amazing to contemplate the millions and millions of dollars which have been contributed by the Jews of America to the cause of Israel in Palestine."

Battle of Bull Run To Be Observed July 21

Preparation for the celebration of the Battle of Bull Run July 21, were announced yesterday by the committee in charge of arrangements, under direction of State Senator John W. Rust, president of tthe Manassas Battlefield Association.

An all day picnic will start on the grounds at 10:30 a. m., and Fred Myers will give a lecture on the battle. Representative J. Ridley Mitchell, of Tennessee, will give the main oration at 2. A band concert has been planned, and vocal music will be offered by four members of the Washington Opera Guild Evangeline Tully, Dorothea Cutting, Ida Wood, and Thelma Hardy, under direction of Marie Morris.

9 More Convicts Flee Prison Farm in Texas

Huntsville, Tex., July 8 (AP).—Nine more convicts escaped from Eastham Prison Farm today, bringing the number of escapes to 28 in 17 days. One of the men who fled today was recaptured in a short time and the other eight were reported cornered in lowlands near Weldon.

Unofficial reports said Prison Guard Lundy was shot in a brush with the fugitives, who escaped by seizing two rifles from a water wagon in a field where they were picking peas. Of the 19 who escaped June 22, all but 4 have been recaptured.

Rep. Clason, Once Held as Spy, Would Rather Talk of Fishing

REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES R. CLASON.

Seized by Germans in Belgium in 1915, Spent Sleepless Night Under Guard; Interested in Connecticut River Flood Control.

By Jean Brownell.

Representative Charles R. Clason (Republican), of Massachusetts, is probably the only member of Congress who can point to an arrest as a suspected international spy.

Traveling in France in 1915 he was halted in the Jura Mountains near the Swiss border. His passport and his genial face failed to convince the German officer he was not a spy—much less that he was a member of the committee for the relief of Belgium.

He admits he didn't sleep very well that night in the hotel room which served as his cell. At dawn five German soldiers goose-stepped in. Trying to think up some dramatic last words, he marched with them downstairs and into a larger room.

There he was offered a glass of beer and invited to join the garrison in celebrating Germany's capture of a Russian fort. The anticipated execution never took place. No patriotic American ever celebrated a German victory with such enthusiasm.

Just now Clason is feeling pretty sad. The length of the session and a flood-control hearing in Springfield kept him from going on a fishing trip to the Gaspe Peninsula. Members of the party write about catching 22 salmon in one day. Probably he wishes he were still district attorney of western Massachusetts and his own boss.

His fondness for fishing dates from a boyhood spent in Gardiner, Me., where he was born September 3, 1890. He was captain of the tennis team at Bates College, Lewiston, Me., where he was graduated in 1911, and won several international tournaments in Geneva.

After graduating from Georgetown University Law School in 1914 and from Oxford in 1917 (he was a Rhodes scholar) he joined the Army. He was decorated by King Albert of Belgium with the Medaille du Roi Albert at the end of the war.

His previous political experience consists of four years as assistant district attorney for the western district of Massachusetts and three more as district attorney. He has taught law at Northeastern University, in Springfield. In the House his chief interest is a flood control plan for the Connecticut River, which nearly washed Springfield away a year ago.

His wife thinks even less of the long session than Glason does. The minute the thermometer hit 93 degrees, she fled to her summer home in Nova Scotia.

Foreigners Bid Highest on 28 Old U. S. Ships

Demand for Scrap Steel Reflected in Offer of $1,021,000.

Foreign demand for both ships and scrap metal were reflected here yesterday when the Maritime Commission opened a new set of bids for 28 steel cargo ships to be sold from the Government's laid-up fleet. As a result, foreign concerns were revealed to be the high bidders on 16 of the vessels.

Although the commission is selling the craft because they are considered of insufficient commercial and military value to warrant their further preservation, the possibility arose the ships might again be utilized in world commerce.

When the Commission first called for bids, it stipulated bidding would be limited to American citizens and the ships must be broken up within the United States, although no restriction was placed on export of the scrap. The highest bid submitted for all the ships, under those restrictions, was $350,050. The offers were rejected.

The new bidding competition was thrown open to aliens as well as Americans, and all stipulations as to disposition of the ships were removed, although it was provided that if the craft were placed in service instead of being scrapped, they would not be operated to or from any United States port within 10 years.

Yesterday's bids, tabulated on a per vessel basis, totaled $1,021,135.97, almost three times as much as was offered previously. The highest individual bid for all the vessels was $660,000.

The foreign bids exceeded on practically every vessel—the American bids. Two concerns in Scotland, two in China and a fifth whose identity was not revealed, submitted offers.

The commission reserved decision on the awards.

U. S. Studying Charges Against Western Union

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department officials said yesterday antitrust- division attorneys were considering prosecuting the Western Union Telegraph Co. for alleged violation of antitrust laws. They added no decision had been reached yet.

The contemplated action is based upon complaints lodged with the Justice Department six months ago by the Postal Telegraph Co., which charged Western Union with taking options on properties with the stipulation that Postal Telegraph not be permitted to rent or lease space on the same premises.

Arabs Protest Plan to Divide Palestine Area

Jews to Get Best Lands in British Proposal, Committee Says.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, July 8.—The Arab higher committee announced tonight it was unable to accept the British plan for dividing Palestine into three parts.

It atacked the plan as proposing to give the Jews a state in which the fertile sections of the Holy Land lie, leaving for the Arabs only the rocky and hilly parts.

Despite an announcement by Lieut. Gen. Sir Arthur Wauchope, high commissioner for Palestine, that the state of security in the country was good, British reinforcements arrived from Egypt and a squadron of Royal Air Force bombers was standing by at Ismailia.

The Arab committee said since Palestine does not belong alone to the Palestine Arabs but to the whole Moslem world and since in critical periods the committee has worked under the supervision and with the support of Arab kings and princes, it was turning to them for advice.

Objections to Report.

It said the royal commission's recommendation for the partition of Palestine contradicted the rights and demands of the Arabs.

Arabs were split, however, as the group led by Ragheb Bey Nashashibi pronounced itself pleased with the report. Nashashibi, former mayor of Jerusalem, recently withdrew from the higher committee.

The Emir Abdullah of Transjordan, to whose country the British proposed the Arab portion of Palestine be united, expressed his pleasure over the report.

The Emir, leading power behind Nashashibi's party, said he believed it should be accepted.

Palestine was quiet tonight but the reinforced military remained on guard.

The high commissioner held separate conferences with Arab and Jewish spokesmen to hear objections to the report of the British royal commission which recommended the partition.

Britain Stands Firm.

London, July 8.—Despite critical outbursts of Jews and Arabs alike, the British government tonight stood by its plan to split Palestine into three parts and prepared to ask early League of Nations approval thereof.

The British royal commission, which investigated disorders in Palestine after the Arab general strike last year, reported yesterday a plan to divide the Holy Land into an Arab state, a Jewish state and a British mandate territory.

Jews, said the Liberal Evening Star, should realize that "half a loaf in peace and with the prospect of more is better than bread eaten amid strife and desolating bitterness."

On Capitol Hill

Public Power Question Again Raised; Senator Austin Said He Has No Hair to 'Curl.'

ELECTRICITY was by no means limited to the air of the Senate chamber yesterday. It sputtered elsewhere on both sides of the Capitol as the public power question was raised again by Representative John Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, in the House and, in the Senate by Vice Chairman Harcourt A. Morgan, of the Tennessee Valley Authority, in a letter to Vice President Garner, received by officials in the latter's absence.

Rankin said the "public power bloc," personnel as yet unannounced, will meet, time unspecified, with David E. Lilienthal, another TVA director, to emphasize the bloc's contention an Arkansas utility contract violates the TVA law.

The Morgan letter was to inform the Senate the TVA has been unable thus far to come to a definite conclusion what its dams and power plants are worth. Such valuation is the decisive factor in determining rates. Morgan said the TVA is continuing its studies.

SENATOR AUSTIN (Republican), of Vermont, is a little doubtful whether he has enough hair to "curl." Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, said during the Senate's court debate Theodore Roosevelt advocated recall of judges—a theory he said "makes the hair on the top of the head of the Senator from Vermont curl." If there were any hair there to curl," the New England Senator agreed.

SENATOR GEORGE W. NORRIS will not return to duty at this session of the Senate, his office announced after receiving a report from the Naval Hospital the veteran Nebraskan will leave the hospital next week following "the general check-up examination." The Nebraskan, incidentally, became in recent days, one of the few Senators who have been the subject of full-length biographies written during their lifetimes.

Sino-Japanese Battle Raging; Scores Killed

By the Associated Press.

Peiping (Friday), July 9.—Agreements for the withdrawal of Chinese and Japanese forces from the zone 10 miles west of Peiping, where they have been locked in conflict since Wednesday, were reached early today.

The agreements, reached after all-night negotiations in which Chinese government representatives, military officials and the Mayor of Peiping took part, provided the Sino-Japanese incident which provoked the most serious fighting since 1933 will be placed in the hands of diplomatic negotiators for settlement.

Chinese and Japanese troops began evacuating the zone at 6:40 a. m. Firing from the Chinese lines upon the withdrawing Japanese threatened for a time to precipitate another crisis, but a peaceful adjustment was made. The Chinese soldiers had not been informed of the peace agreement.

The combat, in which several thousand troops, artillery, machine guns and infantry were involved, swirled around the magnificent 900-foot marble span over the Yungting River, known as Marco Polo Bridge, and the nearby walled village of Wanpinghsien.

Chinese troops held both and defied Japanese demands for surrender. Chinese casualties were reported to total several score. The Japanese had lost one killed, several wounded. Both sides said the other fired first during Japanese night maneuvers near the bridge.

The conflict was the most extensive between Japanese regulars and Chinese since 1933, when the Japanese army, completing its conquest of Manchuria, swept on south of the Great Wall to within sight of Peiping.

Russia Claims Pact Violated.

Moscow, July 8 (AP).—Soviet Russia protested strongly to Japan today against alleged violation of an agreement to withdraw armed forces from disputed islands in the Amur River, scene of fighting last week.

Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff made the protest to Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu after the latter warned Litvinoff clashes on the border of Russian Siberia and Japanese-protected Manchukuo were too numerous.

An official communique said Litvinoff told the Japanese envoy the Amur islands of Sennufu and Bolshoi belong to the Soviet Union and that Japan and Manchukuo had broken their agreement with the U. S. S. R. by leaving troops in the vicinity.

The Amur separates Manchukuo and Siberia. Since last week's fighting the Soviet Union has asserted its own men and ships have been withdrawn from the islands.

"The Soviet government expects the immediate recall of the Manchukuoans," Litvinoff told Shigemitsu.

He declared Soviet border guards had been instructed not to allow incursions on Russian territory by Japanese and Manchukuoans "under any circumstances" and to "repulse" such incursions "by all possible means."

Shigemitsu had been summoned to the foreign office for discussion of the latest fight, in which several were killed Monday.

(A Japanese army communique issued at Hsinking, Manchukuo, said 20 Russian soldiers were killed and many wounded in Monday's clash on the frontier, while 1 Japanese was killed and 2 were wounded.)

Litvinoff asserted the latest clash resulted from invasion of Soviet soil by Japanese and Manchukuo soldiers.

64 "Wreckers" Slain.

Meanwhile, 64 more alleged wreckers of Rusisan railways were reported to have been executed in the Soviet Far East.

It was not known how many others still await trial on the same or similar charges—sabotage at the behest of a foreign power.

The information was gained from a consular report based on a terse dispatched printed July 4 in the newspaper Pacific Ocean Star at Khabarovsk, where the supposed wreckers died. The issue of the newspaper has not yet arrived in Moscow.

(The executions raised to 274 the known total of persons who have been killed in the Soviet's spy hunt within the last year. 217 of them in the Far East.)

There were strong indications many others have been arrested, however, not only on the railways but also in varied other industries in the Far East.

What has happened on the Far East's railroads to lead to such a wave of "liquidations" still is obscure.

Coast Fireman Jailed For Starting Blazes

San Bernardino, Calif., July 8 (AP). Charles Barker, nine years a city fireman, liked to watch flames—so well, in fact, that he often went about firing grass in vacant lots. Fire Chief E. E. Leffen said in this 100-degree weather other firemen do not share Barker's enthusiasm. Barker was sentenced to 50 days in jail.

Cooling Off—From 2,000 to 1,800 Degrees

Stepping outside for a breath of fresh air is just like walking into an air-conditioned room for Lawrence Schleich, even when it's 100 in the shade. As a matter of fact, Schleich, an assistant mechanic at the Navy Yard, was beginning to cool off when the picture was taken, inasmuch as the temperature of the anti-aircraft gunbase he's working on has dropped from 2,000 to 1,800 degrees.

Capital's Heat 'Cold Wave' to Forge Worker

Navy Yard Employe Tends Furnace in 150-Degree Temperature.

As the mercury soared to a new high of 94.3 yesterday, Charley Carter calmly tended his furnaces at the navy yard in a temperature of 150 degrees.

It was just another day to him It still felt cool when he doffed his asbestos jacket and stepped onto the sun-baked streets—far cooler than the out of doors seemed to Senators leaving the air-conditioned Capitol.

Charley works in the forge at the navy yard. His is the hottest job in a very hot place. He stands all day in an area 50 degrees hotter than Washington's streets were yesterday.

When metal is being taken into or out of a furnace he has to step up to the entrance of the blazing inferno. Inside the furnace the temperature is 2,300 degrees. Immediately outside Charley estimates it to be 1,500 degrees.

Can't Wear Metal.

"Of course I can't stand it more than a second or two," he explained yesterday. "If I stayed there longer I'd go up in flames."

He has to avoid wearing any kind of metal next to his body. Metal shirt buttons, for instance, would heat up and sear his skin.

To prevent heat cramps and other discomforts caused by high temperatures, the navy yard officials have had containers of salt tablets placed beside all the drinking fountains. A notice posted beneath the container explains that the tablets replace the salt lost from the body in perspiration.

The navy yard assures its workers that from one to ten tablets can be taken safely each day, but urges them to judge for themselves how much salt is needed. "Some people perspire (sweat) more than others," the notice reads.

No Cool Jobs.

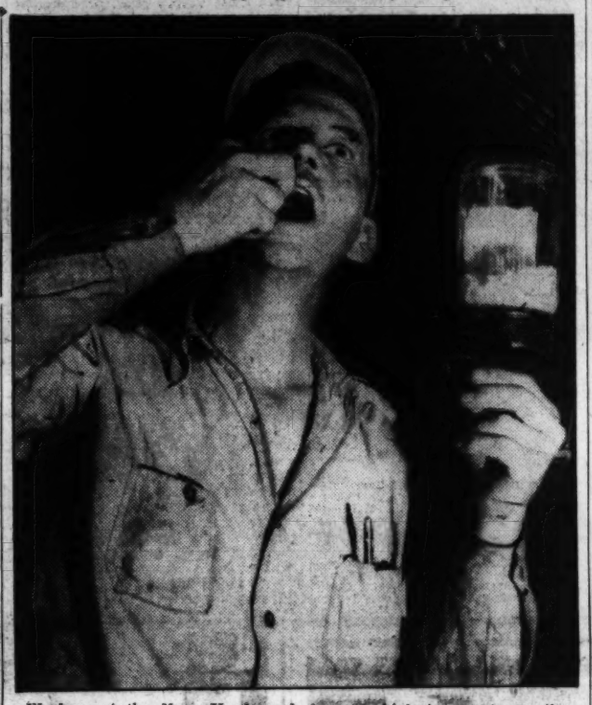
Needless to say, none of the jobs in a building devoted to red-hot metal is a particularly cool one. The next hottest after that of the furnace man is that of the assistant mechanics who wield the glowing chunks that are being pounded into anti-aircraft guns.

One stands at the end of a 50-foot implement resembling a large marshmallow fork. With this he pulls the metal out of the furnace. Another man brushes away the sparks which fall on the giant anvil as a 2,000-pound weight squeezes the metal chunk into the desired shape.

The workers engaged in the latter steps of the process are lucky, because as the metal is worked it cools down from 2,000 degrees to a mere 1,800.

The opposite extreme in the way of temperatures was encountered yesterday by stewardesses on American Airlines planes. Had the windows been opened while the planes were in the air, the mercury would have stood at 47 degrees in the cabins.

Even so the air-conditioning apparatus worked so well that it was found necessary to turn on the steam heat for the passengers' comfort.



Workers at the Navy Yard work in such high temperatures—the year around—the management urges them to take salt to replace that lost through perspiration. Charles Carter, a furnace man, helps himself to a tablet.

Mercury Climbs To New High at 94

rounded up by Park Police in Potomac Park last night for selling on Government property, a violation of Federal law. They were released on payment of $5 fines.

When fagged Government workers left their offices yesterday afternoon, they went to the nearest drug stores and cafes to thwart the heat with cooling soda fountain drinks or beer.

Hundreds, contemptuous of the baking sun, visited the golf courses, and many others went to the swimming pools to splash away their discomfort.

Out at the Boy Scout Jamboree the Scouts from all-over the world had a common foe—the heat—and they conquered it with the resourcefulness of extreme youth. Some ate ices and ice cream, others swam and all were extremely glad of their shorts and low-cut blouses.

In the crowded tenement districts last night men and women, as lightly clad as possible, leaned from their windows in a slight breeze that rolled up from the Potomac.

There were shouts of glee at many District places yesterday as youngsters found the fountains an oasis, and splashed beneath streams of water that tumble from marble and stone statues.

The current heat wave stretches from the Middle West across to New England. Deaths in the area affected were computed at 27 last night.

Out in South Dakota, the Nation's "bread basket" and often its oven, as well, several cities reported temperatures of 100.

Boston reported 17 persons were dead tonight, victims of heat prostration and drowning in New England as the mercury soared to record heights, according to the Associated Press.

Byrd Plans Polar Trip For Last Time in 1938

Anti-Marriage Clause Repeal Voted by House

manded husbands support their families and women remain at home.

Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, ardent defender of the merit system, led the fight on the minority side, while all the women Democrats joined hands in aiding the bill by exhortation and vote solicitation.

Among the most active vote-getters, it appeared, was Representative Mary T. Norton, former chairman of the House District Committee.

Most of the debaters shied from the angle of the controversy most publicized, i. e., that Section 213 forced young men and women in the Federal service to forego marriages while living as man and wife because of the fear of dismissals.

Interferes With Marriage.

Representative Bigelow (Democrat), of Ohio, a former clergyman, looked the issue squarely in the eye, however, and said:

"Section 213 is an unwarranted interference with marriage relations. It says to two sweethearts who come here to work in the Government, 'You shall not be married,' although marriage is the natural relationship of man and woman."

The problem was attacked from another point of view by Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, who was married during the present session of Congress.

"At a time when other countries are encouraging marriages," he said, "it seems strange for this country to be discouraging it."

Chairman Ramspeck told the House his chief objection to Section 213 was not that it resulted in discrimination against married women, but that it discouraged young people coming to Washington for jobs in the Government from getting married.

Elimination of the committee amendment, which in effect would limit family incomes to $4,000 from the Federal Government, was a victory for resident Washingtonians, as Boileau pointed out.

Boileau charged the committee amendment would discriminate against the sons and daughters of present Government employes by preventing them from getting jobs in the city's "biggest industry" if their father or parents earned more than $4,000 from the Government.

"That would mean that a boy or girl would have to leave home, and possibly go into one of our States, in order to find work when he or she grows up," he said.

Cochran, before introducing his amendment, assumed full blame for authorship of Section 213. He, not Herbert Hoover, he said, had devised the plan for spreading employment during the depression.

Still Proud of it.

Declaring he was still proud of the act, he stated he had run on a platform of support of Section 213 last fall and had been re-elected by a larger majority than ever before. He cited a survey by the Institute of Public Opinion to substantiate his assertion the majority of voters are opposed to giving Government jobs to both husband and wife.

His amendment, which was twice adopted in committee of the whole, sought to extend Section 213 to all emergency agencies, which are not now covered by the statute, and to the District Government as well.

Asked by Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, whether the amendment would cover members of Congress and their employes as well, Cochran shouted "no."

A short while before, Representative Cellar (Democrat), of New York, author of the repeal bill, had pointed out that many members of Congress have had their wives on their office payrolls. He cited as an outstanding example "the patriarch of the Senate," Vice President Garner, although he did not mention him by name.

Cited Roosevelt Attitude.

Cochran and Ramspeck became involved in an argument as to whether President Roosevelt favored repeal of the "marriage clause."

The Missourian was skeptical, but Ramspeck said, "Steve Early told me last year that the President wanted the bill passed," but admitted he had never had direct word from the Chief Executive.

Cochran shot back a warning against getting a report on the President's attitude from one of his secretaries.

The Missourian warned the members further reductions in personnel are imminent throughout the Federal service as a result of the executive order to curtail expenses of Government departments 10 per cent.

Madrid Troops Launch Attack To Split Rebels

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 8.—Government troops, stirring the Madrid front to life with a new offensive, drove south and west today in what observers believed was a pincer maneuver to cut insurgent troops on the capital's fringes from their main army.

The three-day-old drive, the government said, reached the outskirts of Quijorna, 18 miles west of Madrid. Gen. Jose Miaja, government commander, concentrated his strength south of the Casa De Campo, where treeless plains gave his tanks favorable terrain.

(Insurgent officials, admitting the western drive was the strongest movement yet made by the government forces, were believed shifting northern troops to the active zone. They said government militiamen had "infiltrated" toward Quijorna, but insisted the Case De Campo attack was repulsed with 2,000 government dead.)

Insurgent arillery on the outskirts of Madrid was reported turned from the targets within Madrid it has been pounding for eight months on to government forces on the west.

Nonintervention at Crossroads.

London, July 8 (AP).—The course of European nonintervention in Spain apparently reached a critical crossroads tonight, the eve of a full dress review of the deadlock.

Informed sources indicated the issue between Italy and Germany on one side and France and Great Britain on the other might be avoided by sidetracking the question to a new special sub-committee.

Other quarters feared Germany, Italy or France might block such a plan by insisting that the meeting of the full neutrality committee tomorrow settle definitely how Europe was to keep the civil war from spreading.

The nonintervention plan has been in dispute since Germany and Italy withdrew their warships from the international patrol of Spain's coasts last month.

Sea Washes Up Riches For Jersey Carpenter

Point Pleasant, N. J., July 8 (AP).—The sea has washed up more coins for Jesse Howland, who keeps his eye open as he builds jetties along the north Jersey shore.

Dredging at the Manasquan-Bay Head Canal yesterday, Howland found a cask, which yielded 65 rare gold coins, which he estimated, from a collector's standpoint, were worth about $8,000. Howland, who estimated his find had been buried 50 years, said the gold may have belonged to a retired sea captain.

'Hitler Youths' Sound Trumpets as Camp Opens

Youth of all nations receives increased attention in training, with Italy and Germany leading the movement. These lads are sounding trumpets for the opening of the "Camp of Germany" at Brandenburg. Some 1,500 "Hitler Youths" from all over the world and 1,500 German children spend vacations there.

Museum Gets 1,150 Specimens, But May Simply Use Them Up

When the Smithsonian Institution says it needs 150 more birds from the coast of Africa, that is no indication at all that the birds will be stuffed and set upon a shelf to please and educate the sightseers.

The fact is that museums "use up" a great number of specimens every year and are constantly on the verge of running out of some of them.

Gerrit S. Miller, jr., Smithsonian curator of mammals, for instance, has just returned from the Panama Canal Zone—with 450 mammals, 150 birds, 150 reptiles and amphibians, and 400 specimen sheets of plants.

"Any of them new? My goodness, no. Just replacements," the curator smiled yesterday. "The nearest I came to bagging a new specimen was when I shot a bird that is so similar to our indigo bird that I came near throwing it away. They tell me it is a rare finch and that we had only one other in the museum."

The institution uses up specimens in its study of them. Miller brought back eight porpoises from the Pacific coast of Panama. They will be compared bone for bone with porpoises from the Southern California and South America coasts, to determine whether there might be an important "transition zone" in the canal area.

By accompanying detachments of Army Engineers who were cutting new roads through the jungle, Miller was able to secure a large number of curious epiphytes—or air plants, which grow in the tops of trees and feed on dust that gathers in the tree tops. It is only when the large trees are felled that collecting of epiphytes can be carried on with comfort.

"Since botany is just a hobby with me, I suppose I enjoyed collecting the plants more than I did the mammals," Miller said. "I also enjoyed visiting the Chilibrillo bat caves just north of the Canal Zone proper."

The bats are so numerous in these caves that more than 100 specimens were secured by Miller by a single shot with a .32 cartridge loaded with dust.

The curator was accompanied by Charles L. Wheeler, Harvard University graduate who served as student assistant

"We found the northern birds down in the area as migrants very much of a nuisance They make themselves so much at home that one is inclined to mix them up with the natives. This was my first trip into the canal area, I was somewhat surprised to find the lack of animal life, in comparison to what I have encountered in continental areas," Miller said. We did not see a single poisonous snake, and not as many snakes of any kind as one is sure to see in Florida.

Plane Designer Escapes Hurts in Forced Landing

C. W. Bunch, St. Louis airplane designer and manufacturer, escaped injury yesterday when he made a forced landing at Hoover Field.

A veteran of ten years' flying experience, he was taking off for St. Louis when, at an altitude of about 150 feet, a vapor lock in the gas line caused both of the motors to go dead.

Bunch said he would have made a perfectly safe landing anyway but for the fact that he had retracted the landing gear and didn't have time to release it. About $80 damage was done to one propeller and the two carburetors, he said.

The accident occurred shortly after noon. A few hours earlier Bunch had flown into Washington from St. Louis on a business trip.

Father Divine's Olympics Turn To Mere Picnic

By the Associated Press.

Kingston, N. Y., July 8.—Father Divine's "Celesital Olympics" simmered down under a 95-degree sun to a prosaic picnic today.

Nearly 2,000 followers of the baldpated little Harlem colored cult leader gathered at their super-super heaven in nearby Greenkill for an ambitious sports program that was to mark the official opening of this 1,000-acre "promised land."

But what with a misunderstanding about bus fares, and lack of preparations in so far as sports fields were concerned, the gathered disciples were willing to settle for dinner and a little lolling in the shade.

Disciples and angels, arriving by steamer from New York, piled aboard buses that were to take them 4 miles to the Greenkill "heaven." But here a hitch developed. The bus drivers said the fare was 20 cents; Divine's followers had understood it would be 10. As a result some 1,000 excursionists were left stranded here.

This caused a curtailment of track and field events on the "Olympic" program. The golf contests were called off after disciples discovered the fairways were mayfields and the greens had disappeared in the tall grass. Tennis enthusiasts were similarly disappointed.

So the faithful lolled on the banks of "the River Jordan"—pronounced "Rondout Creek" by Ulster County natives—and waited for dinner. It consisted, said Martin I. Borden, publicity agent for Father Divine, of 1,600 pounds of chicken, 459 pounds of goose, a quantity of turkey, ham, cauliflower, spinach, beets, potatoes, rice and corn on the cob.

Brilliant Comet May Be Observed Starting July 18

Cambridge, Mass., July 8 (AP).—A great comet, which hasn't visited the earth for possibly 100—perhaps 1,000—years, was heading back tonight and may become visible to the unaided eye late this month.

Dr. Fred L. Whipple, Harvard scientist, predicted the object would reach its maximum brilliancy about August 10.

Leland Cunningham, of the Harvard Observatory staff, predicted it would first become visible to the naked eye shortly after midnight July 18 and would attain its maximum brilliancy within about 50,000,000 miles of the earth—twice as close as the sun.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Bidding the Full Strength.

When your partner makes a very strong bid you should look at your hand and determine whether or not you have more than the minimum strength needed for a response. If you have considerably more (about the value of an additional King) you should avoid closing the auction with a bid which does not represent the full value of your hand.

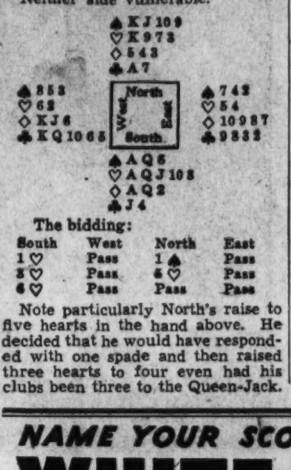
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Note particularly North's raise to five hearts in the hand above. He decided that he would have responded with one spade and then raised three hearts to four even had his clubs been three to the Queen-Jack.

His doubleton Ace warranted a greater show of strength and, for want of a better bid, he raised to five hearts. South, with three Aces and an excellent fit with North's spades, accepted the invitation by going to six; and careful play brought the slam home.

West opened the King of clubs and declarer won with dummy's Ace. Two rounds of trumps were followed by four rounds of spades. On dummy's last spade declarer carefully discarded the deuce of diamonds rather than the losing club.

The contract apparently depended on the diamond finesse, but South could be sure of winning thir finesse if he discarded the low diamond and would have only a 50 per cent chance if he discarded the club.

This paradox is explained by the fact that a finesse is sure to win if the player with the tenace is in a position to play last to the trick. South intended to make West lead diamonds. By saving his club he could force West to win with his Queen of clubs, after which a diamond return would ride up to the Ace-Queen, whereas a club return could be ruffed in the dummy while South discarded the Queen of diamonds.

By using care in discarding losing cards, South easily brought home what would otherwise have been an impossible slam contract.

Grandsons to Rule Pinkham Firm

Boston, July 8 (AP).—Three grandsons of Lydia E. Pinkham today won a victory in Massachusetts Supreme Court in their long battle with women relatives for control of the $3,000,000 patent medicine business founded by the Quaker school teacher over 60 years ago.

The court upheld the petition of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., of Lynn, for an injunction to prevent its treasurer, Mrs. Aroline P. Gove, only daughter of the founder, and its assistant treasurer, Miss Lydia P. Gove, Mrs. Gove's daughter, from interfering with the business. The original Lydia's grandson, Arthur W. Pinkham, is president of the company. His brothers, Charles and Daniel, are associated with him.

Wage-Hour Bill Board Stripped Of Vast Power

Measure Goes to Senate; 'Roof' of 40 Cents Hourly Is Set Up.

"lously, carefully and without disturbance or dislocation" through a policy of open hearings before the Labor Standards Board.

The board must find that the application of minimum wages will not curtail jobs before ruling minimum wages which must be "as nearly adequate as economically feasible," while considering: The cost of living; the value of services tendered without wage contract; comparable wages achieved through collective bargaining; comparable wages achieved through voluntary agreements with employers. With these considerations in mind, it may establish any minimum wage but not more than 40 cents an hour.

The board also may not fix maximum hours at less than 40 per workweek, upon consideration of: The relation of the work to the health of the workers; number of persons available for employment in the occupation to be subject to such order; comparable work weeks achieved voluntarily or through collective bargaining.

Learners, apprentices and those physically impaired may receive lower wages under board exemptions, and overtime employment for all workers is permitted only on payment of time and one-half.

Tariff Provisions Included.

The tariff provisions sponsored by Senators Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, and Walsh, were included in the new bill. These provide, in brief, that the United States Tariff Commission, upon request of the President or Congress, or the new board, or on its own motion, "shall investigate the difference resulting from the operation of this act and in the costs of production of any domestic article and of any like or similar foreign article, with a view to determining whether or not an increase should be made in the duty upon such foreign article for the purposes of equalizing such differences.

The only other important change is that appointment of an advisory committee to investigate a particular situation is made mandatory under the new measure, whereas the old bill allowed such an appointment at the discretion of the board. Such committees are made up of employers' and employes' representatives with the addition of a few disinterested and impartial citizens, one of whom shall act as chairman.

Black, in submitting the committee's report during the midst of intense court bill debate, asked directly for its passage this session, and mentioned incidentally permanent farm legislation and the Wagner housing bill as also "in the direct scope of the Democratic platform of 1936."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the majority leader, told reporters consideration of any of the three bills as this session is unlikely.

He told officers he had been hiding in a barn near the dance hall and had not eaten for five days. He suffered greatly from the summer heat in the barn loft.

All "Het" Up Over the Weather

Cotton Acreage Increase Spurs Farm Bill Drive

By Russell Smith

Cotton farmers have planted 34,192,000 acres, heaviest planting since the 1933 plow-up campaign year and 10.4 per cent more than last year, the Federal Crop Reporting Board announced yesterday in its regular estimate.

This acreage will yield between 12,337,000 to 15,300,000 bales, dependent upon loss from weather and insects, it was indicated.

The report, following upon estimates of harvest, is expected to lend impetus to the drive for general farm legislation at this season of Congress.

President Roosevelt did not send to Congress yesterday, as had been anticipated, his letter emphasizing the need for such legislation. It is expected, however, the letters will go to Capitol Hill this week.

Warned to Cut Acreage.

AAA officials and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace have warned repeatedly against large cotton planting this year as tending to depress cotton prices, which hovered slightly over 13 cents a pound most of the year.

Dependence of cotton upon world markets makes it more vulnerable to world conditions than any other American crop. As compared with wheat, 5,400,000 bales of 12,300,000 produced were exported last year, whereas wheat exports were but 19,000,000 of 3,500,000,000 produced.

Hence cotton farmers are especially dependent upon benefit payments from AAA, since neither present nor proposed legislation includes provision for raising prices above the world price.

Their plight is further emphasized by an Agriculture Department statement that cotton "exports in the nine months ending with April 1 were somewhat less than shipments in the same period last season."

It is anticipated the crop report will spur Chairman Marvin Jones, of Texas, and the House Agriculture Committee, as well as other Southern members, to renewed efforts to write into new farm legislation additional provisions directed toward assistance of the cotton farmer.

The crop board is forbidden by law to estimate yield. From Federal records, however, an approximation of the yield is possible. The average per-acre yield the last four years has been 192 pounds, the highest 212 pounds and the lowest 171 pounds.

'Ironhead' Baker Violates Parole, Faces Life Term

Austin, Tex., July 8 (AP).—James (Ironhead) Baker, colored man, who sang his way out of the penitentiary, must return and continue a life sentence as an habitual criminal.

Gov. James V. Allred said today he would revoke a parole granted the singer last year so he might travel about the country with John A. Lomax, gathering folk songs for the Library of Congress.

Recently "Ironhead," so called because a tree splintered when it fell and struck him on the head, was arrested on several burglary charges.

John L. Lewis Plans Unionized Santa Claus

By the Associated Press.

Santa Claus will be a union man if John L. Lewis has his way.

The industrial union chief announced yesterday a campaign to organize the country's 100,000 toy and novelty workers.

The announcement followed a conference with Alexander Ravitch, secretary-treasurer of the Doll and Toy Workers Union of New York City, and Allan S. Haywood, regional director for the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Duce's Son, Col. Biseo Claim World Air Mark

Rome, July 8 (AP).—Italy claimed a new world air speed record today for Il Duce's son, Bruno Mussolini, and the premier's personal pilot, Lieut. Col. Attilio Biseo.

The pair flew 262.633 miles an hour for 1,000 kilometers with a cargo of two tons. They were flying a Savoia-79 plane. The previous record, held by Biseo alone, was 236.712 miles an hour.

Treasury Issues Bills to Regain Billion Balance

$50,000,000 Weekly Will Be Offered; Roosevelt Renews Thrift Plea.

By William V. Nessly.

Shortly aftre the Treasury announced yesterday it was increasing its borrowings by $50,000,000 a week, President Roosevelt, in conference with heads of 28 independent agencies of the Government, called on them to save at least 10 per cent of their current appropriations.

The President's action followed his addressing a letter, some ten days ago, to heads of the regular Government departments, asking them to conserve at least one-tenth of their appropriations in the interest of a balanced budget.

Secretary Morgenthau told of the increased borrowing plan at his press conference yesterday. The Treasury, he said, is going back to its former policy of maintaining a "comfortable" working balance, which, he said, meant more than $1,000,000,000 of ready cash. Beginning Monday, there will be offered a series of $50,000,000 in Treasury bills weekly, due December 15, in addition to the same amount of nine-month bills already being sold each week. The borrowings thus will total $100,000,000 a week, the Secretary declining to say how long sale of the new series would be continued.

Cite Conditions Abroad.

Unsettled conditions abroad are believed responsible for the desire to keep a healthy working balance on hand. With each new war scare in Europe sending another flood of gold to this country, the Treasury needs cash on hand with which to buy the gold and "sterilize" it. The cash on hand at present is approximately $900,000,000. Previously this year, it has been down to less than $500,000,000.

Morgenthau said the Treasury had let its balance run down during the first quarter of the year in order to co-operate with the Federal Reserve System, which was increasing reserve requirements of banks and also buying United States bonds in open-market operations at a time when many banks were selling the issues and the prices were declining.

With that phase ended, he said, the cash supply would be built up again.

Maturity of the Treasury bills on income-tax payment dates, he pointed out, will level off the money market with the least possible disturbance.

Rapid Money Changes.

Situations in the world financial markets change so rapidly the Treasury intends to operate on a 24-hour basis, it was made clear.

At the same time it was learned that in the last four or five days France has been gaining considerable amounts of money, and, as a result of the movement of gold back to France, that metal has been at a premium in London. Since the new French cabinet took control, with Georges Bonnet, former ambassador here, as minister of finance, the monetary situation there is reported much improved—whether the additional funds are due to movement of metal back from London, the dearmarking of British gold in France, or the reappearance of gold hoarded by the French.

The amount of gold imported to this country in the near future likely will have a bearing on continuation of the new borrowings, since the working balance provides funds for the purchase and sterilization of the incoming metal.

The likelihood President Roosevelt's economy drive will improve the market for Treasury bills was speculated on.

Many of those attending the White House conference expressed confidence they could comply, including Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC; Stewart MacDonald, Federal housing administrator, and John H. Fahey, chairman of the HOLC.

Secretary Morgenthau, Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell and WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins sat in on the conference.

Anna Pease Dies; Pioneer Educator

On June 28," said the report, "the Itasca advised Earhart that the ship's direction-finder frequency range is 550 to 270 kilocycles. The Itasca ship direction-finder manned at 7:25 a. m., and Earhart was repeatedly requested to transmit on 500 kilocycles to enable the ship to cut her in. She neither acknowledged nor complied, though the Itasca's advice indicates the plane's ability to transmit on 500 kilocycles."

A traveling wire-antenna was a part of the original equipment of Miss Earhart's radio set-up, and was frequently used to good advantage by her navigator, Capt. Harry Manning, on her first round-the-world attempt from Oakland, Calif., in March, which ended a few days later when a wheel collapsed and the plane was partially wrecked as it was taking off from Honolulu for Howland Island.

Even the Western Electric Co., makers of Miss Earhart's 50-watt transmitter and all-wave receiving set, were unaware the flier was no longer able to communicate on three frequencies.

S. W. O. C. Calls New 'Walkout' At Youngstown

Strike Set for Today in Republic Plant Where 6,200 Are Working.

By the Associated Press.

Warren, Ohio, July 8.—The threat of a new "walkout" at Republic Steel Corporation's Youngstown mills was dropped on strike-troubled "Little Steel" tonight.

The "walkout," set for 11:30 a. m. tomorrow at the Youngstown mill, was announced by George Simcox, assistant to Tom White, president of the Republic Steel Workers Organizing Committee lodge there.

"We have key men in the plant and they will bring the men out," Simcox told several hundred strikers and sympathizers at a mass meeting. Republic reported today that 6,200 men were working in its Youngstown plant out of an average daily employment of 6,800.

Ohio National Guardsmen are still on duty at the plant. Earlier today indictments were returned against eight accused Warren bombers in connection with steel strike violence here.

Seven men already are in custody; the eighth man was not named.

One of the bombs was hurled from a car pursued by National Guardsmen, on a bridge near Republic Steel Corporation's plant here, while the Seven States steel strike was in progress.

Chief of Police Barney J. Gillen previously had announced six of the suspects, charged with illegal possession of explosive devices, had confessed and implicated Gus Hall, who subsequently was removed from his post as Committee for Industrial Organization organizer in the Warren-Niles district. Hall surrendered voluntarily.

Steel Front Quiet.

The steel front continued quiet as more men entered the mills to resume work.

Republic opened its Steel & Tubes, Inc., plant at Cleveland, the last of its Ohio mills to be returned to activity.

There was no disturbance. Police and guardsmen watched the opening, which Republic said brought in more than 300 of the 500 men normally employed.

Republic's move left Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. with the only closed plants among the "little steel" group affected by the strike called May 26. Two Sheet & Tube mills in the Calumet district of Indiana remained closed, with 7,000 men idle. Efforts to reopen them went forward, however, led by Indiana's Gov. M. Clifford Townsend and State labor officials.

Alcoa Talk Refused.

Alcoa, Tenn, July 8 (AP).—A move to arbitrate differences between strikers and management of the Alcoa plant of the Aluminum Co. of America, where 2 men were killed and 28 wounded in rioting yesterday, apparently collapsed tonight.

Gov. Gordon Browning, in response to a request from Fred Wetmore, president of the Aluminum Workers' Union at Alcoa, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, telephoned A. D. Huddleston, regional manager of the company, to get his reaction to appointment of a board of arbitration.

Huddleston said later that since the company's wage scale "is higher in relation to Tennessee living conditions than that paid workers at the Pittsburgh plant," he did "not believe the company has anything to arbitrate."

The strikers are asking an increase from 45 to 60 cents an hour, or approximate wage parity with the company's workers in Northern plants. The fabricating plant reopened yesterday after having been shut down since May 18. The reopening brought a pitched battle between strikers and guards.

Paying Same Wages.

Huddleston reported that 766 returned to work on the early morning shift and that they were relieved on the next shift by the 639 who went back to their posts yesterday. They are being paid the same wage as before the strike, he said.

More than 200 State troopers remained on strike duty, but Adjt. Gen. R. O. Smith expressed the belief there would be no further trouble.

"Peaceful" picketing was in progress today by an agreement between the union and Maj. Ray Crittenden, of the Tennessee National Guard.

Conciliator Arrives.

J. C. Howard, Department of Labor conciliator, arrived during the day to "try to mediate and conciliate, but not to investigate."

Divergent statements were made as to the cause of yesterday's shooting, which resulted in the killing of Henson Klick, 30, a striker, and W. M. Hunt, 42, a special officer.

Chief of Police Arthur Lively said pickets opened fire first. Wetmore charged, however, that guards fired "on peaceful, unarmed pickets," and that company guards were Wool Walkout Ended.

Boston, July 8 (AP).—Patrick O'Grady, organizer of the Wool Handlers and General Warehouse Employes Union, tonight said the union had voted to return to work, ending a three weeks' strike which has clogged this port's piers with bales of wool.

Radio Channel Switch Impedes Earhart Rescue

Itasca Unable to Reach Fliers on Bands Other Than 500 K. C.

Because neither Amelia Earhart nor her navigator, Frederick Noonan, could send and receive in radio code, and therefore abandoned the 500-kilocycle frequency used by all ships at sea, they made rescue efforts difficult, experts said last night.

Miss Earhart and Noonan fell that the antenna necessary for the 500-kilocycle channel would be too cumbersome, it was revealed.

The 500-kilocycle channel was the one by which the huge "flying laboratory" could have kept in direct touch with the Coast Guard cutter Itasca, and the only one on which the Itasca could take a bearing through its radio finder.

Just before she left Miami, Miss Earhart explained why she and Noonan abandoned the channel and left the huge craft dependent on the two radio telephone ferquencies—6,210 kilocycles for day and 3,105 for night transmission.

"If either Fred or I could use the key, it would be different," the tousle-haired flyer said.

It was felt, furthermore, that had the radio been operating on the 500-kilocycle frequency, the fliers would not have missed tiny Howland Island and become lost in the vast South Pacific.

Officials of the Coast Guard said messages frequently were sent the plane to communicate with the ship on that frequency.

Both the text and the faintly irritated tone of the terse and factual official report sent to Washington yesterday indicated the Itasca's commander was ignorant of the decision to change the frequency.

Dr. W. J. Duncan Dies at Home Unexpectedly

Ex-Professor at G. U. Medical School, Planned to Teach Again.

Funeral services for Dr. William Joseph Duncan, 37, former professor of anatomy at Georgetown University Medical School, who died yesterday, will be held at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow at his home, 1423 Juniper street. There will also be services in St. Michael's Church at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Dr. Duncan gave up his duties at Georgetown in 1933 because of ill-health. Mrs. Duncan found her husband lying unconscious yesterday morning in their home, where he died shortly afterward.

A native of Washington, Dr. Duncan was graduated from Gonzaga College in 1917, Georgetown University in 1921, and the Georgetown Medical School in 1925. For the next six years he was a practicing physician here and also served as assistant professor of anatomy at Georgetown. He gave up his practice to take over the professorship in 1932, and was one of the youngest men ever to hold that position. He had planned to start teaching again in the fall.

Dr. Duncan was a member of Omega Upsilon Phi medical fraternity, and of the American Medical Association. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Geraldine Duncan, and four sisters, Mrs. Theodore Barclay, of Washington, and Mrs. Charles McCarthy, Mrs. Frank Kenney and Mrs. John Griffin, of Waterbury, Conn.

Frank McGinley Dies Here at 79

Frank McGinley, 79, 227 Eighth street northeast, died yesterday after a long illness.

Mr. McGinley, who had been an employe of the War Department for some 30 years, was born in Norristown, Pa., and had been a resident of Washington for many years.

Husband of the late Alice Reagan McGinley, Mr. McGinley is survived by a son, Bernard McGinley, and two daughters, Mrs. Mary Bowes and Mrs. Angela Watkins, of Vienna, Va.

Funeral services from his residence will be held tomorrow at 8:30 a. m., thence to St. Joseph's Church.

Norfolk Police Seize Two Missing D. C. Girls

Two 16-year-old school girls, missing from Washington since last Sunday, were located in Norfolk yesterday and held there by police pending the arrival of their parents.

The girls, Aileen Hodnett and Eleanor Dredge, of Takoma Park, Md., left the home of Mrs. Emma Windsor, 915 Eighth street southeast, where Aileen and her mother, Mrs. Marie Hodnett, of Jersey City, have been staying. It was learned they took a taxicab to Alexandria and hitch-hiked from there to Norfolk.

Lewis Defeated In First Test, Green Declares

'Ill-Advised and Untimely' Steel Strikes Lost, A.F.L. Chieftain Claims.

The steel strikes are lost, and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, which directed them, has "failed to meet its first major test successfully," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared yesterday.

Continuing the feud that has raged for months between the Committee for Industrial Organization and the Federtaion from which Lewis and his colleagues are suspended, Grene issued a statement taunting the "rebel" organization and declaring the strikes "ill-advised and untimely."

At the same time the C. I. O. was receiving the support of the State administration of Pennsylvania in its effort to obtain a quick employe election in the Johnstown, Pa., plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, representing Gov. George H. Earle, appeared before the National Labor Relations Board here and asked the board to expedite the election, offering aid of members of his staff in whatever investigation is required by the board.

Cites Deaths, Distress.

Pointing to the "toll in human life and human suffering," and the "distress which individuals and whole communities have suffered and will suffer from the strikes, Green, in his statement, added:

"The hosts of labor are truly sorry because of the failure of the costly experiment and its tragic outcome. They regret that thousands of workers were persuaded to sacrifice themselves. . . . Resentment and disappointment among those workers is bound to follow."

"The violation of agreements, the seizure of public property, violence, riots and uprisings can have no place in the social, economic and industrial life of America," the statement said, before concluding belligerently:

"No hostile employer in America has done the cause of organized labor more harm than those who formulated, executed and administered the policies of the C. I. O. during the past 18 months."

Green declared the strikes were lost because only a minority of the steel workers at plant involved were organized, and because "public opinion was aroused by the violent policies pursued by the C. I. O. in automobile and steel during the past year."

He pictured Lewis in a dilemma over what to do about the miners in the steel company mines whom Lewis had called out to prevent the steel companies from getting coal. The A. F. of L. head asked: "Now that the steeel mills are in operation will be call out on strike those mine workers who are employed at mines where the steel companies will now buy their coal?" He said the alternative was to direct those workers of the "captive" mines "back to work, defeated and demoralized."

Declaring "we cannot permit all organized labor to be penalized because of the stupid mistakes of the C. I. O.," he added the A. F. of L. must intensify its fight against enactment of "repressive legislation"—such as compulsory arbitration and incorporation of unions.

Attorney General Margiotti made his election appeal verbally before the N. L. R. B. The Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, organization of the C. I. O., filed its election petition on July 6 here, the move being intended to determine whether the S. W. O. C. is entitled to recognition as the bargaining agency for the Johnstown plant's employes.

Two Shipyards Reopen.

New York, July 8 (AP).—Bith sides claimed victory tonight after two big shipyards opened their doors for work in an attempt to break a C. I. O. strike which shut down more than a score of plants in the New York-New Jersey coastal area since June 14.

At the same time a bitter word duel was launched between rival maritime labor organizations as a result of John L. Lewis' announced plans to bring 300,000 East and West Coast waterfront and ship workers into one big union.

Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Union and an American Federation of Labor vice president, declared the Lewis drive is backed by "communist money." Charles de Grass, deck division trustee of the national maritime union, the prospective C. I. O. affiliate, denied Ryan's charges and said "everyone knows that's the cry of a loser."

The shipyard situation was in an uncertain stage as police estimated 1,100 went to work at the Robins Dry Dock in Brooklyn, while both the C. I. O. leaders and company officials agreed only 150 to 175 of 800 employes returned to Tietjen and Lang yard at Hoboken, N. J.

Rare Portraits of George Mason, Wife Unearthed at Alexandria

Paintings By Hesselius, Done on Bed Ticking, Declared Authentic; Relics Were Believed to Have Been Destroyed.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 8.—Portraits of George Mason, author of the Declaration of Rights adopted by the Continental Congress, and his wife, painted on bed ticking by Hesselius, have been found in the home of S. Cooper Dawson, on Seminary Hill, in Alexandria.

Miss Julia Sully, director of the art-index division of the Virginia Conservation Commission, said her "find" was the most important discovery since the division was established six months ago. It was generally believed that the portraits had been destroyed, she said.

The portraits had been in possession of Dawson, a direct descendant of Mason, for many years.

She said she saw some photographs of the paintings, which appeared to have been taken from originals rather than copies, and, after considerable difficulty, learned of Dawson. The latter invited her to view the paintings.

"I subjected them to a close examination, took their measurements, wrote down their description, and then asked Mr. Dawson if it were possible to take down one from the wall so I might examine the back of the canvas," Miss Sully said.

"It was never the custom of these artists of early days to sign canvases on the face, but now and then by examination with the microscope, it is possible to decipher a signature on the back.

"I carefully felt behind the picture and my fingers touched the flat crossed stretcher keys which were generally used by painters of the nineteenth century. Then my fingers encountered, instead of harsh canvas, a soft and yielding fabric. The portraits were painted on bed ticking.

"There could be no more convincing proof of their authenticity. Hesselius was known to have used bed ticking sometimes, in which he was followed by his pupil, Charles Willson Peale, whose full-length portrait of George Washington was painted on the same fabric.

"Upon consulting 'Life and Letters of George Mason,' by Kate Mason Rowland, I found Mason brought over weavers and established looms at Dogues Neck, on which all of the materials of this sort had been woven.

"The stripes in this bed ticking are spaced a little wider than in the customary pattern, and it is probable that it was actually woven at Mason's home at Dogues Neck."

Smith Not Foe Of LaGuardia

New York, July 8 (AP).—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, returning from Europe today, said he would not be a candidate for mayor on the Democratic ticket.

His arrival was expected possibly to clarify a confused situation in regard to the Tammany candidate resulting from the refusal of Senators Robert Wagner and Royal Copeland to run against F. H. LaGuardia, fusion incumbent.

Almost simultaneously a group of prominent Republicans called on Mayor LaGuardia with an invitation to run again with their support and he accepted.

Colored Spouse Held for Trying To Drown Son

Mother Pushed Him Into Potomac, Child Tells Police Court.

Charged with attempting to drown her 8-year-old son, Armethia Green, colored, 29, of 715 Rhode Island avenue northwest, was held yesterday for grand jury action under $10,000.

Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran ordered the woman held following the testimony of Clarence Tyler, the woman's son.

Taking the witness stand at the preliminary hearing, the child tearfully told the court his mother had pushed him into the Potomac River near Highway Bridge Tuesday.

Judge Curran established a precedent after hearing the boy, by ordering the mother to the stand. Generally, the defendant does not testify at the preliminary hearing.

The woman said the boy fell into the river. She could not, however, explain why she made no effort to summon aid.

Policeman William E. Brennan, of the Fourth Precinct, and Wilton Satterfield, colored, 21, of 56 R street northwest, rescued the child and took him to the Receiving Home.

In Police Court yesterday, Claude Bullard, colored, 32, of 808 New Hampshire avenue northwest, said he saw the woman push the boy off the seawall while he was crossing the bridge in a truck.

Befuddling The Issue.

Leaders of the fight for enlargement of the Supreme Court are apparently willing to center their efforts on any issue save the merits of their bill. Senator Robinson set the pace by trying to make an issue of filibustering. Then came Senator Logan with his attempt to show that the court row simply involves a question of loyalty to the President. Now Senator Pittman is ready to divert the debate to a tangent question of what constitutes "one day" in the meaning of the Senate rules.

With such a vital issue at stake, true statesmen would not raise the question of party loyalty. The Senate has to decide whether our constitutional democracy shall continue to function with an independent judiciary or a court that may be influenced by pressure from the Chief Executive. Only in the minds of politicians seeking an excuse for their own attitude is this question posed as one of loyalty or disloyalty to the President.

In the interests of candor and realism, opponents of the bill insist that its purpose is to put on the Supreme Bench new men who will change the interpretation of the Constitution. Senator Logan replies: "Only those think so who have vitriolic hatred of President Roosevelt and his Administration." His statement is obviously unfounded in fact. Since the court bill has reacted against the President's prestige, those who are fighting it have sound claim to the distinction of being his best friends.

Certainly proponents of the bill are in no position to raise the issue of party loyalty. The silence of the Democratic platform on enlargement of the court is an old story. If political language still means what it says, it is the group seeking a constitutional amendment to prevent superannuation on the bench which is clinging to the Democratic Party's official policy.

These attempts to befuddle the issue are the more unreasonable when linked with efforts to stifle debate. An entirely new bill is before the Senate. It has not been studied by the Judiciary Committee. Since it involves the vital principle of discretionary appointments to the Supreme Court, new hearings before the Judiciary Committee might reasonably be demanded. The least that can be asked is full and complete debate on the floor of the Senate. But apparently Senator Pittman is ready to place a strained interpretation on the rules to cut off the thorough discussion which the opponents have planned.

All these evasions and short-cuts are likely to redound to the disadvantage of the measure in the end. It would be an empty victory, indeed, if the Supreme Court should be packed, against the wishes of the people, by distorting legislative rules, by applying political pressure and by trailing red herrings through the Senate.

A Star Is Born.

Let Chaplin throw wide his doors; let Garbo for once really "go home now." A new star in the Hollywood firmament far outstrips both in aloofness. The exciting "discovery" is a press agent's dream: Insured for a quarter of a million dollars; a doctor of science for a manager; domiciled in quarters made of glass and platinum; only three persons allowed on the set and they only with periscopes.

But this exclusiveness is no pose, nor need any current favorite fear for his fan mail. The new star is a bit of radium, no bigger than the head of a match. It is being photographed for a science "short."

Notwithstanding the mineral nature of the new film principal, however, it has a characteristic frequently observed in the movie colony. That is its high volatility. For years it may command attention as a perfectly ordinary piece of radium, dependable and satisfactory as, say, Adolphe Menjou was in his long period of "straight" parts. Then, in a few seconds, the processes of radio activity will suddenly transform it into a radically different mineral, with a changed atomic weight and a new set of waves. So, too, Menjou changed overnight into a "character" actor—equally popular but for new and unsuspected qualities.

In the end, of course, Time, the relentless catalyzer, will completely disintegrate both. Menjou will revert to the clay from which he sprang and, a few million years later, the bit of radium will have become an equally inert end-product, lead.

Great Britain And Palestine.

The liquidation by Great Britain of the responsibilities which she assumed in the Near East during and immediately after the war has been going on apace during recent years. Irak, of which Great Britain was once mandatory, has become an independent nation. The protectorate established over Egypt in 1914 and maintained in considerable measure until last year, is now definitely a thing of the past. And now Great Britain plans to rid itself of the unwelcome burden of responsibilities it assumed with the mandate for Palestine. To this end she proposes means as drastic as they are unprecedented.

From the viewpoint of British interests there are real advantages in the scheme of partition outlined by a royal commission and approved by the government. The establishment of separate Arab and Jewish states in what is now Transjordan and Palestine is calculated to end the embarrassing necessity of having to hold the balance between Jew and Arab. Both of these peoples can point to British promises in support of their claims in Palestine. And, with a show of logic, Great Britain is in a position to argue, though somewhat speciously, that the partition plan goes far in carrying out those pledges whose execution, on the basis of the existing situation, is impossible.

It is not surprising, therefore, that London views the plan adumbrated by Lord Peel and his colleagues as a godsend. Yet the circumstance that it hastened to approve that plan without first permitting public debate regarding its provisions reveals an inner uneasiness which suggests a troubled conscience. And what success Great Britain will have with this plan remains to be seen. Partition may create more problems than it may solve.

In any case, Great Britain today is haunted by the ghosts of its past promises, by the pledges of ultimate nationhood given to the Arabs in 1915, which the Arabs do not regard as fulfilled; by the Balfour declaration of 1917 which held out to the Jews of the world the promise of a national home, which led to the very remarkable economic renaissance of the Holy Land by the terms of the League mandate of 1922.

If Arab-Jewish relations today are, as the royal commission declares, in a state of "irrepressible conflict," no small measure of responsibility for this unhappy condition rests with Great Britain herself. In Palestine the policy of "muddling through" simply has not worked. And if the Arab-Jewish conflict is really irrepressible, which is by no means certain, it is questionable whether it would be solved by the Balkanization of the Holy Land.

To be sure the commission, nicely weighing what it considers the advantages and disadvantages of the plan both for Jew and Arab, argues that both sides have more to gain than to lose by partition. For the Jews, it says, it "secures the establishment of the Jewish national home and relieves it from the possibility of its being subjected in the future to Arab rule." The Arabs of Palestine, on the other hand, are to have another independent state.

Yet the national home now contemplated is a small fragment of the historic Land of Israel and a fragment divorced from its spiritual center, Jerusalem. Between a fourth and a third of Palestine's Jewish population will be outside the proposed Jewish state. And there will be at least 200,000 Arabs in that state.

The commission suggests there may be an exchange of populations, such as took place between Greece and Turkey. This suggestion alone shows what a tangled web the British may be creating while imagining that they are really cutting the knot of Arab-Jewish hostility. Instead of eliminating the frictions that have made the Holy Land a hotbed of dissension and conflict, the proposed partition may only accentuate them.

Possibly, as the British argue, there is now no satisfactory alternative to partition. This is open to question. But if so the solution proposed constitutes an admission of failure by Great Britain. Problems are never solved by being multiplied.

A Welcome Ultimatum.

The airplane crash which Washington had come to believe would be necessary to bring about improvement of the city's landing facilities may now, fortunately, be avoided. The National Airline Pilots' Association has unanimously condemned the present airport as unsafe for general transport operations. It has served notice that unless better arrangements are made within 60 days, the pilots will refuse to fly their big 14- and 21-passenger ships here, except when wind conditions are particularly favorable.

Washington, in particular, and air travelers, in general, owe the pilots a vote of thanks. The awaited crash nearly happened a few days ago. A plane loaded to capacity nicked a tree in taking off, swerved downward and only through great luck and expert piloting managed to recover its equilibrium. Nor was this the first miraculous escape from tragedy recorded at the Washington airport.

For more than 10 years seasoned pilots who have come into the field have cried out against its inadequacies. In response, a series of bills to provide the Capital with an adequate landing field have been introduced in Congress. But none has ever passed. More than a year ago a special commission was named with instructions to select a proper site for a permanent airport. It was expected to make a report at the beginning of this session so that its decision could be thoroughly studied. As yet, there has been no word from it.

It is generally assumed that the commission has been delayed by a wide split of opinion on the question. Indeed, it has been reported with reasonable credibility that certain members of the group have more than once changed their minds. Nevertheless, its report will probably be made public today. There is an uncomfortable feeling that because of the pilots' spectacular ultimatum, the committee felt bound to report on the matter. The danger in this is that some sort of unsatisfactory compromise agreement has been hastily devised.

Washington is too important an air terminus, actually and potentially, to tolerate any half-way measure at this stage of the controversy. Even though it should mean that the city would go without regularly scheduled air services for a few months, it would be better to delay commitment on any new venture until it can be made absolutely certain that it is the best possible.

A few years ago New York City in a fit of excitement rushed into the construction of the Floyd Bennett Airport only to find when it was finished that it was too inconveniently located to be of practical use. As a result, the beautiful landing field is scarcely used today. Washington wants no repetition of such a costly blunder.

No Time To Be Smug.

Premier Chamberlain, speaking in the British House of Commons two weeks ago, compared the present European situation to a potential avalanche, so perilously poised that "an incautious move or even a sudden loud exclamation" may precipitate disaster. On Wednesday night, before the Institute of Public Affairs in Charlottesville, our Undersecretary of State reached an equally gloomy conclusion. "We can but express the anxious hope," said Mr. Sumner Welles, "that the sands in the hourglass have not yet run out."

A feeling of horror is aroused when men in such responsible positions, accustomed to weigh their every word with scrupulous care, reveal so clearly the anxieties which prey upon them. Yet reflection shows that this is a far healthier attitude, at the present juncture of world affairs, than any Pollyanna optimism. "It would be perilous to minimize," to quote Mr. Welles again, "the urgency of the need for courage, for intelligence, for vision and for a conciliatory spirit on the part of the statesmen of the world at this hour."

The disaster of 1914 came in large part because so few stopped to count the costs in advance. Today, when everyone realizes something of what another war would mean, the chances of a rational solution of dangerous problems are multiplied. If the will is sufficiently strong our civilization can find the way to avert any further experiments in international suicide.

A main necessity is more complete realization, as stressed by Mr. Welles, of the enormous interest which the United States has in the preservation of peace, and therefore, the importance of working constructively to that end. The same point was emphasized by M. Bonnet, the new French Finance Minister, in his statement given exclusively to The Post and printed in yesterday's paper. M. Bonnet speaks only literal truth in saying that current European disorders "could have the most immediate and extremely serious repercussions upon the welfare of America itself."

The new French government is obviously doing its best to re-establish the financial stability basic to any form of successful international co-operation. Mr. Welles' reference to the developing prospects of an Anglo-American trade agreement as clearly shows that new territory in this field may be won, in addition to regaining that which has been lost.

But "it would be perilous to minimize" the need for complete sincerity, and a certain humility, in developing our foreign policy to meet the crisis. In parts Mr. Welles' address tended a little too much toward smugness. To tell Europe that we stand ready to lend a hand after that continent has achieved "revitalization of international morals" is not so helpful. After all, an American President had too much to do with the framing of the peace treaties for us to disown successfully all responsibility for their aftermath.

To ascertain just where and how America can help in securing peace is a task as difficult as it is vital. Fulfillment of the responsibility will not be forwarded by any intimation that the immorality of others is such as to check our national will to be helpful in a world emergency.

Evolution Of The Lunch Wagon.

From the Literary Digest.

With one-arm lunch wagons, wily drys of a half century ago set out to deal John Barleycorn a body blow.

Perambulating eating places on wheels, known as "Night Owls" because they did business mainly at night, already were dispensing frankfurters and chicken sandwiches in Worcester, Mass., and New York City. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union bought several of these, baited them with flaky pie and rich coffee to lure tippling males from liquor-dispensing eating haunts.

John Barleycorn survived this flank attack. The lunch wagon in turn outlived its anti-wet role, blossomed into an American institution. Daily more than 1,200,000 Americans clamber up the stoops of about 4,000 "diners"—so-called because they resemble dining cars—spotted on corner lots and on roadsides throughout the country.

If you joined diner devotees at a quick "cup o' java," you'd find, if it were daytime, that you were rubbing shoulders mostly with horny-handed men in denim. If it were before dawn, you might be rubbing shoulders with men in tails, homeward bound from a night of revelry.

F. D. R. And Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt's friends say he is not a Communist. I do not believe he is, but he has by word and action advanced communism in this country 25 per cent beyond what Communists could have accomplished without his help.

Communists have always preached class hatred. President Roosevelt from the start of his campaign has on every occasion preached class hatred—using such terms as "economic royalist," "Tory," "self-interest," etc.

Last year at the annual meeting of the Third Internationale (a Communist organization) in Russia, the United States delegates were sent home with instructions to have Communists join Farmer-Labor and labor organizations, and bore from within. Next we hear that President Roosevelt has requested the Democrats to withdraw in favor of two Farmer-Labor members running for United States Senator and Governor, respectively. The Democrats withdrew and the Farmer-Labor candidates were elected.

The American Federation of Labor has always opposed Communists joining their organization. John L. Lewis fell out with the A. F. of L. and started a new organization called the C. I. O., and with great assistance of President Roosevelt the C. I. O. has rapidly grown in membership. Communists hastened to join and were received with open arms. Norman Thomas, Socialist, is for the C. I. O. as the route the Socialist Labor Party must take. The correct interpretation for C. I. O. would be "Communist International Organization."

Mr. Baker, a close friend of President Roosevelt, quits a Government job today to organize the Federal workers for the C. I. O. The workers will join for fear of losing their jobs if they do not join an organization backed by the President.

The Communists destroy the courts. The President is trying hard to destroy the Supreme Court of the United States by packing the court with six new members who will render decisions according to his wishes, instead of in keeping with the Constitution. He also tries to belittle the lawyers by referring to them as "defeatist" lawyers. Is it any wonder that the C. I. O. members disregard all laws?

EDWARD P. HUBBELL.
Washington, July 1.

Rep. Lewis On The Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Lewis, New Deal member of Congress from Maryland, in a speech in the House yesterday succeeded in thoroughly demonstrating his ignorance of the Constitution and the decisions of the Supreme Court. He charges that by reason of the decisions of the Court mentioned by him the Government has lost nearly $16,000,000,000 in revenue, and cites these decisions in justification of his support of the bill to pack the Supreme Court and destroy its independence to the utter destruction of our form of government and jeopardy of our liberties.

It is a curious anomaly that the humblest employe of the Federal Civil Service has to prove his qualifications for the job he seeks by an examination, while men are elected to Congress to legislate on the complex and intricate affairs of the greatest Nation on earth with no test or consideration of their qualifications for the job, but apparently upon the assumption that by election they are ipso facto endowed with wisdom which they never possessed. Is it any wonder that Congress commands so little confidence and respect from the intelligent portion of the people?

Practically every decision of the Court referred to so disparagingly by Mr. Lewis was in accordance with the Constitution, and could not have been otherwise if the judges remained true to their oath to support, defend and protect the Constitution, which is declared to be the supreme law of the land.

Take for a single illustration his reference to the decision "not obliging Federal judges to include their salaries as part of their income in computing their income taxes." Why should the Court have decided otherwise in view of Section 1, Article 3 of the Constitution, which provides that the salaries of the judges shall not be diminished during their continuance in office—a provision which was wisely intended to make the judges independent of the whims and caprices of Congress in discharge of their high duties.

The real trouble is not with the Supreme Court, but with Congress in the enactment of poorly drafted and often unconstitutional laws.

Crab On All-Stars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the chairman of the New Deal said when a labor mess he'd let fasten itself on the country got too fragrant for official nostrils: "Plague on both your shacks." I'm not being anti-anything when I say, speaking of baseball: "A plague on the all-star game." And enough sport scribes will string along to make it a quorum.

The fans were to select the teams, but this noble idea soon fell in the grease pan. Controversy revolves. Shall the bleachers, bench brain trusters of lofty-browed scribes (don't fall faint, scribes) pick the delegates? What's it matter?

Yeah, enough fans will fall for it for a sell-out if they play up the ballyhoo. And most of the ballyhoo is as flabby and forced as a night dive hostess' handshake. The game splits the season halfway without good reason. Each manager grunts it's a thankless job, he'd rather be fishin' in Goose Creek back home.

I'd rather see two outfits of punks fighting to keep out of the cellar notch than the best crews of all-stars ever tamed and led onto the arena with blasts of ballyhoo.

The "woild serious" is enough. Let's chuck this thing before it grows incurable; let all clubs toss in a bit a head on the annual charity day. This all-star thing don't mean nothin'. Every fan in every town has a gripe. CRAB.
Washington, July 6.

Aid For The Starving.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am aroused by the need for expediting action so that while the "red tape" of the Government is taking its course, the poor people of Washington will not starve to death. If the Army and Navy are instructed to furnish from their supplies food and clothing for flood and storm sufferers, then why should not the indigents at your very door be supplied the same way?

When many many thousands are being expended to rescue one lone woman who has tried to encircle the globe just to satisfy her own personal desire (according to her own husband's statement), then why must 2,600 persons starve for lack of mere sustenance? It seems most unfair.

Is there any reason why the Army cannot be directed to help these sufferers? I like Miss Earhart, but I do not see any possible justification for the discrepancy in expenditures.

ELEANOR CURTIS.

"Class" In America.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "If we are not to have class division in America . . ." a well known newspaper commentator prefaces a summary of argument in support of social recognition of labor union heads.

As applied to human beings the term "class" is used by real Americans only in a contemporary or narrow sense, and never in any permanent or fundamental sense.

Our commentator would have us see "class" as compatible with, and "division" as incompatible with, American idealism, but just the opposite is true. American democracy means above everything else the right to be divided, the right to be divided on all issues either as groups or as individuals, to be divided in worship or in social life or in labor.

G. A. M.

Firemen's Week.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You are to be congratulated on E. T. Folliard's fine article, of July 5, explaining the inner workings of the D. C. Fire Department. He gave a correct picture of the efficiency, responsibility and technical knowledge required of our firefighters, and paid deservedly high tribute to the department heads responsible. But since a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, I wish to speak for the strength of the great majority of links—the $1,900-a-year privates.

They, too, are efficient, responsible and intelligent. To be admitted to the department today these men must pass a physical test comparable in severity with those required to enter West Point or Annapolis. They must pass a mental test requiring the mind of at least a high school graduate and must be of a character absolutely above reproach.

The department heads, with the exception of deputies, are on duty 44 hours per week and their salaries range from $5,000 to $8,000. These $1,900 links are on duty 72 hours per week. I maintain there is too much differentiation, and especially so in this day when private industry is on a 44-hour schedule and successfully fighting for a 40-hour week.

There is a bill pending in Congress to somewhat narrow the above differentiation. Its enactment would lower the schedule from 72 to 60 hours per week. With other industry on a 40-hour schedule a request for a 60-hour one should be considered a modest request indeed.

For some inexplicable reason and in spite of the present Administration's policy, this 60-hour bill is being given a glorious run-around by our own District officials. They, so far, have advanced no logical reason for their muffling and sidestepping activities.

J. M. JAMIESON.
Washington, July 6.

Mr. Remington Again.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since Mr. Conrad Paine repeats his belief in communism may I make one more reply? I also repeat that I have seen communism and I have seen fascism.

I saw them as a "third-class" traveler and worker—in Russia "third category"— but there was no difference except the trains were not as good. Having seen, I want none of communism and none of fascism.

I also defy Mr. Paine to prove that in Communist Russia a worker is free to go where he pleases. He must have a pass. I also defy him to prove that the hours and conditions of labor are any better under communism than fascism. Neither offer the freedom or conditions as good as our workers have.

To say that communism is giving the worker more than capitalism is idle talk. That we have the highest standard of living in the world is accepted everywhere, including Europe. The American worker is really envied by every worker in the world who knows conditions.

The Russian government is so afraid that the Russian worker will become discontented that American pictures and books are carefully censored. You can not buy any American magazines in Russia except a few radical ones.

If Mr. Paine really believes communism is so superior to our capitalistic system he should move to Russia and live there.

NORMAN REMINGTON.

"Let Us Affirm."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By the grace of God and the common sense of the great majority of American citizens, let us affirm and reaffirm that the Government of this land of the free need not and shall not be either Fascist or Communist. We want no dictator commanding us, we require no suggestions from the Socialists as to the disposition of our property.

We do not need to imitate European misgovernment. Knowing the paths which lead to peace and prosperity, let us not depart therefrom.

Dog Guides In Coaches

SENATE and House in Washington have passed a bill allowing dogs specially trained to guide blind men and women to accompany their masters on all American railway trains, whether in day coaches or Pullmans. Back of this announcement there is a charming, fascinating story of peculiar interest to Tennesseeans.

All this began several years ago when Morris Frank, a Nashville youngster, deprived of his eyesight by accident and illness, stumbled into a ditch and lay there for hours unable to extricate himself. Frank was intelligent and ambitious, firmly determined not to allow loss of sight to keep him from living a full life otherwise. Surely, he thought, there must be some way to better conditions for himself and for others handicapped as he was.

* * * *

About that time young Frank heard of an experiment being conducted with German shepherd dogs as guides for the blind. The work was being done at a place called "Elysian Fields," in Switzerland, but that did not deter him. As swiftly as trains and vessels could carry him, he was there and in conference with the alert, sympathetic English folk in charge of the school for dogs and humans. To make a long story short, Frank came back to this country with a dog and an idea, both most remarkable and commendable.

That was a good many years ago, but both the dog and the idea have been with Frank ever since. First in Nashville and now in Morristown, N. J., Frank has conducted what is aptly known as the "Seeing Eye" School. There blind men and women come from here and there to be trained with the dogs assigned to be their eyes. The process is extraordinarily interesting, and the results no less than amazing. To those who have never had the privilege of watching these dogs work, the fidelity, skill and intelligence they develop is inconceivable. The reliance of men and women on these dogs and the extent to which the animals justify it is something that really must be seen to be believed.

* * * *

Frank's own dog, "Buddy," has written one of the most remarkable stories of canine faithfulness and acumen on record. She takes Frank along crowded streets, even guarding him against anything hanging down over the sidewalks against which he might strike his head. She warns him of every step up or down, and in crossing streets she watches out for traffic in a manner no human could surpass. This writer would not make oath that "Buddy" knows about traffic signals, but he has seen her mind them more than once. She brought Frank safe out of a burning building one night and she has taken him securely across the maelstrom of traffic at Forty-second street and Broadway. "Buddy," by the way, is but typical of many other German shepherds which are performing similar marvels.

Congress is precisely right in giving these dogs the privilege of entering railway coaches with their masters. Their manners are beyond any exception. In fact, if all other passengers on American trains behaved as well as these guides and guardians of the blind, trainmen would live far easier lives than they do as matters stand. The whole story is one of the finer and more appealing ones of all those that have been written in the record of the helpful, affectionate relationship between man and dog. By and large, it is no wonder that "Love me, love my dog," is still the motto of so many people in this world.

Good Job Well Done.

The American Red Cross last week completed its vast task of rehabilitating 43,787 Ohio families whose belongings, homes and in some cases means of livelihood were swept away in the Ohio River flood.

At a cost of some $5,000,000 in the State as a whole, and nearly $2,000,000 in Hamilton County, the Red Cross endeavored to wipe out the disaster's effect upon those most sorely stricken. How well it has accomplished that undertaking is by now fully apparent. Homes have been repaired or replaced and the necessities for a new start in life have been furnished to the thousands of families who just five months ago were clustered in emergency relief stations, their homes inundated, their belongings lost.

As the American Red Cross writes finis to its flood-relief work in Ohio it can do so in the realization that it has done another great job well. The services it rendered here justified the trust reposed in the organization by the untold thousands of individuals, organizations and firms who, learning of the distress caused by the great flood, turned to the Red Cross as a medium of giving toward the relief of flood suffering.

The completion of the work of the Red Cross is an occasion for thanks again to those whose generosity made it possible, and thanks to the Red Cross organization itself for the thorough way in which it translated donations into service.

"Mr. Facing-Both-Ways."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President has now come out with "a plague on both your houses" from Romeo and Juliet, referring to the C. I. O. and the labor troubles.

He has turned again, temporarily, of course, to the attitude of Mr. Facing-Both-Ways, a not much respected character in Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress." What a pity the nobler characters in that allegory do not appeal to him.

Watching A Python Have Lunch.

St. Louis, July 8.—Forest Park is a pleasant rolling expanse of grass and trees, surrounding a small artificial lake. Forest Park is the home of both the zoo and the municipal opera company. As yet, neither has complained of the other's presence.

TOM McCARTHY.

I went out to the park after completing my night's work in the St. Louis market, intending to find a nice shady spot in which to sleep, thus enabling me to use my night's earnings of 75 cents for food only. I wished to remain in St. Louis just long enough to hear one performance of their municipal opera company.

I arrived at the park just in time to see them feed the python. Now, if you imagine feeding a python is anything in the way of the usual, let me correct that impression right now. Feeding a python might be best compared to the task of muzzle-loading the big gun of a battleship, while standing in a small boat, overside, in a choppy sea. Judging from the feeding of the St. Louis python, it takes a dozen men for the actual job and 30 or 40 to shout directions.

While all the visitors to the park assemble around a roped-in square, the keepers proudly carry the python into view. It takes eight or ten men to carry the great snake, which has the dimensions of a good-sized battering ram, tapered at both ends. Then, while the park-going citizens of St. Louis cheer, they insert the end of 5 feet of fire hose in the python's mouth.

The fire hose has been previously stuffed with food. The stage is now set for the crowning gesture of the act. A headkeeper steps forward and, while he doesn't bow to the audience you can see that he appreciates the dignity of his position and would like to make a bow or two.

* * * *

While the audience waits tensely, the headkeeper inserts a plunger in the piece of fire hose. Then, after poising himself dramatically for a moment, he lets it ride, and 15 or 20 pounds of food is virtually bombarded into the python's 10 or 12-foot tummy.

After the eight or nine men holding the python have regained their grip, and the anchor man hanging onto the tail has gained a fresh hold, they give an encore performance. After that, the python, groggy but game, is carted away to get back its strength for future performances.

It really doesn't seem quite "cricket to have to take meals before an audience of several hundred people, with eight or ten men holding you down.

* * * *

After I'd seen the python act, I stretched out under a tree, with the hope that no policeman, noting my clothing, would decide that I was no citizen of his city and forthwith chase me out of the park. I must have slept for more than an hour when I became conscious of someone standing over me. I opened my eyes in the full expectancy of a crisis with a bluecoat. When I looked up and saw a pretty little girl, 6 or 7 years old, holding out a plate of food to me, I was sure that I was dreaming.

"Mummy, says we've got more lunch than we can eat," the little girl informed me. "Wouldn't you like some," she said holding out to me the well-laden picnic plate.

Food had gained a new importance in the last few hours and, while I had eaten lunch, that picnic plate looked too good to pass up. I accepted it with grateful yelps, and with each bite of the sandwich, the apple, the banana and the cake I blessed the friendly people of St. Louis. A plate of food sent down to an unshaven tramp sleeping under a tree is an indication of real neighborliness.

* * * *

It is probably more accurate to state that you have "seen" a performance of the St. Louis Civic Opera than it is to say that you've "heard" a performance. Not that it's hard on the ears, but rather that it's much easier on the eyes.

A huge outdoor auditorium seating close to 10,000 people, its free seats are occupied sometimes as early as five hours before the performance. The other seats, which are reserved, are priced from 25 cents to $1.50. Built on the slope of a hill, the seats run down toward a huge outdoor stage, whose only roof is supplied by the leaves of giant elms growing up through the floor. Visually, the performance and its background are arresting. Audibly, the municipal opera doesn't measure up so well.

Jerome Kern's "Music in the Air" was the production during the week in which I attended. The huge outdoor stage was brilliantly lighted, making use of subsidiary revolving stages as the background for a brilliant array of costumes. As the figures whirled and gestured to the lilt of the music, beneath a summer sky, it was a grand sight. The music, however, seemed less important than the spectacle.

* * * *

I left St. Louis at midnight. Once again I was broke, but I had found a job in the town and earned enough to keep me there for 24 hours, even though the disposition of my earnings required some ingenuity.

As I left the city, I had some hopes of catching a ride toward Kansas City, even though the hour was late. I did catch one ride which brought me rather uncomfortably to the outskirts of the city. My host was the driver of a liquor truck, a young-old man whose face defied any guess as to his age. He might have been 16 or 35. The discomfort from the ride was occasioned by the fact that he made it a point to inform me that he carried a "persuader." A persuader, I discovered, is nothing more nor less than a revolver. I didn't like the idea of riding at midnight with a stranger who carried a gun.

After walking along for a mile or two I decided that I'd have to sleep in a field. I didn't pick out a very good one. The grass was high and wet. I spread my raincoat on the ground, put my knapsack under my head and tried to sleep. I was tired enough, but a squadron of roving mosquitoes insisted on making a night of it. I had only been there a few minutes when their advance guard found me out. After that there was no such thing as live and let live. It was a fight to the finish.

They zoomed and "hell-dived." They came down on me in pairs and squadrons. They roared by my ears in stunting formation trying to divert my attention with strategic moves. While I listened intently for the warning hum, they crept under my cuffs and raised welts on my arms. They got in my hair and raised bumps on my neck. I was a rare find and it was a big night for the mosquitoes of Missouri.

While the mosquitoes were doing their level best to leave me a bloodless corpse, another battalion of death from the insect world got in a few blows below the belt—those low down, footpads of the insect world, the Missouri chigger.

A mosquito at least gives you some warning, but a chigger has no concept of fair play.

When I staggered from the field in the morning, red-eyed and beaten, I resembled a victim of some medieval plague, as all visible sections of my flesh carried a neatly woven network of chigger holes and mosquito bites.

Drought In Canada

By William Marchington.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa.

WHEN PREMIER MACKENZIE KING and the rest of the ministers who represented Canada at the coronation and the Imperial Conference rejoin their colleagues at Ottawa this week, they will have a variety of pressing problems to tackle. But none will be more serious than that created by the recurrence of a very serious drought situation in the prairie region of Canada.

The settlement and development of this huge territory, which embraces the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, was in the first quarter of the present century the mainspring of the remarkable economic progress achieved by the Canadian people. It grew what was claimed to be the finest hard wheat in the world and this crop commanded a ready sale in the markets of the world. Its production received an enormous stimulus during the war years when prices were high and the expansion of the acreage planted to wheat went on after the war ended.

In the decade 1923-1932, the lowest yield of the Canadian wheat crop was 262,000,000 bushels in 1924, which was counted a very poor year. It ran as high as 474,000,000 bushels in 1923, 479,000,000 in 1927, 567,000,000 in 1928 and 428,000,000 in 1932, mostly grown in the prairie provinces. Its sale brought a great deal of money into the country and the purchasing power it produced inured to the benefit of the manufacturing and mercantile establishments of eastern Canada.

Wheat Growers Sure Nature Would Provide.

THE PRAIRIE grain growers kept on planting wheat and other grains year after year in serene confidence that Nature would always be kind and bountiful to them and fill their granaries to overflowing, except perhaps in an odd year when she might withhold her favors. But years ago, warning voices were raised to utter reminders that the early explorers, like Capt. Palliser, classified a large part of the southern regions of the prarie provinces as "semi-arid." Records of the past show the occurrence of prolonged spells of droughts for this territory; the warning has continued, and continuous grain cropping without any attempt to restore or conserve fertility is dangerous because, if the topsoil which was the result of the accumulation of decayed buffalo grass, forming a rich humus over millions of years, becomes exhausted, the result may be a ruinous desiccation of the soil.

But these prescient men were derided as foolish Jeremiahs and the western farmers went on "mining" the land instead of farming it on conservatives lines with some thought for the morrow.

The first signs of impending trouble came in 1931 when a large tract of the southern prairie country was afflicted by a devastating drought which cut Canada's wheat crop to 321,000,000 bushels, 100,000,000 bushels less than that of the previous year. The year 1932 saw some districts still drought-stricken, but conditions generally were better and the wheat crop increased to 428,000,000 bushels. Then followed four more years of severe drought for the southern areas and few were the districts that had a commercial crop.

The northern territory which had stretches of woodland and was fairly well supplied with moisture continued to produce reasonably satisfactory crops of grain, but experienced observers like Mr. William Motherwell, a former federal minister of agriculture, who had a farm in Saskatchewan, reported that the area liable to drought was growing every year. He declared that year by year he saw the desert encroaching upon what had been fertile territory.

Provinces Forced To Supply Relief.

AS A RESULT of the drought, thousands of farming families in the prairie provinces had to go on relief and a heavy additional strain was put upon the resources of the federal and provincial governments. There was also a serious shortage of feed in the devastated territory and large numbers of livestock had to be killed off or moved to more favored country. Everybody was involved in the calamity as the farmers had no money to pay debts or taxes but the ingrained optimism of the average Westerner could not be shaken. It was confidently believed that the drought must end sooner or later and the rains come in their former volume every summer.

It is true that a certain number of farmers, despairing of their future, migrated to virgin territory north of the Saskatchewan River and elsewhere, but the great majority of the settlers in the afflicted territory clung to their farms, hoping for better days.

In the fall of 1936 there was an ominous absence of the rainfall which was needed to build up subsoil moisture reserves, and as the snowfall in the winter was slight there were forebodings in the spring about the fortunes of the grain crop of 1937. But it was planted early and as there was considerable rainfalls on the prairies in April and May it was thought to have gotten off to a good start. But June has proved to be a fatal month. Except in some specially favored areas, there has been a dearth of adequate moisture over a wider area than in any of the recent bad years. Moreover, the spells of excessive heat have been prolonged.

It is the province of Saskatchewan, once described as "the breadbasket of the British Empire," which is bearing the worst impact of a drought. A good deal of its northern territory still has the promise of a decent crop, but south of Saskatoon, which is in the center of the cultivated are of the province, all reports agree that the crops, save in isolated patches, are now ruined beyond recovery. Under the parching heat the young grain has wilted day by day and if it has come to any growth of straw at all it is heading out prematurely with the prospect of pitiably small yield.

The province of Alberta has a more diversified terrain and in certain sections of it crops are fairly good, but in others the ruin is almost as complete as in southern Saskatchewan. At present the crop experts estimate during June about 10,000,000 acres of wheat or almost half of the total acreage planted in the western provinces have been destroyed by drought, and there is no assurance that the process of deterioration has ended.

Saskatchewan Letter Paints Bleak Picture.

THE FOLLOWING picture of the drought situation was given in a letter to the Ottawa Citizen by a resident of Flaxcombe, Sask., under the date of June 23:

As I write this letter I see crops of wheat seeded almost two months ago barely above the ground and now flattened and withered. A 50-mile-an-hour gale is raging and the air is laden with thick particles of dust, so much so, that I have to light a lamp by which to see. At this time of the year I visualize a green countryside, whereas, in reality, stark desolation sweeps the country on every hand. Truly we have a Dust Bowl in western Canada. Again, I write, Canada is faced with a national calamity.

Other reports confirm the accuracy of this picture and it is plain that the federal government and the provincial ministries of Saskatchewan and Alberta will have to face in the coming months enormous expenditures for the relief of farming families much higher than ever before. Somehow or other succor will be provided to carry the indigent settlers and their families along and avert their starvation, but even if this is arranged for there will still remain the larger problem of the future of the drought-stricken territory.

Last session the federal Parliament voted a substantial sum to finance a long-term program of soil rehabilitation for the devastated area. Plans have been formulated to spend it on scattered irrigation schemes, the creation of grazing reserves and afforestation. But it is now becoming apparent that these plans are paltry and inadequate palliatives for what is a clamaitous condition whose scope has greatly increased this year. Some bolder and more comprehensive policy will have to be devised if prosperity is to be restored to the prairie country without a reversal of the present trends of natural forces.

There is in some quarters advocacy of irrigation planned and carried out on a scientific basis and on a scale heretofore undreamt of in Canada, but the expense is almost prohibitive. About one point, however, there is a general agreement, namely, that most of the southern territory should never have been brought under the plow and that it should be restored as soon as possible to its original role of a ranching country.

Meanwhile, the people of the devastated areas are in a mood of sullen despair and as the government of Saskatchewan is in a sorry financial plight and that of Alberta is no better, they are looking to Ottawa for salvation.

Single-House

By Bryant Putney

Unicameral Legislatures.

SUCCESSFUL operation of Nebraska's new single-house legislature, which held its first session this year, foreshadows the ultimate creation of unicameral legislatures in many other States, in the belief of Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, the leading champion of the unicameral system.

The new legislature this year demonstrated "great superiority" over the old two-house body in Nebraska, Senator Norris says. "When the work of this legislature has been fully understood and analyzed, it will have its influence upon many other States. In time it will result in the abolishment of the old two-house legislatures in many other States besides Nebraska."

A similar prediction was made by W. F. Willoughby, an eminent political scientist, in 1934, before adoption of the unicameral plan in Nebraska. "Should one State make the break and go over to the new system of a single chamber," Willoughby said, "it might easily result that others would speedily follow the example. It is not so long ago that the bicameral system was the prevailing one in our municipalities. With the movement once started for the substitution of the unicameral system, the change over to this system took place with great rapidity until at the present time the bicameral system is found in few of these governments."

* * * *

THE ACCURACY of these judgments is attested by the fact that proposals for establishment of the unicameral system were advanced in the legislatures of no fewer than 22 States this year. One such measure failed to passage in the Wisconsin assembly, late in April, by a margin of only eight votes. Another proposal was defeated in the lower house of the Arkansas legislature, in January, on the ground that it represented "a step toward dictatorship." Proposals for adoption of the unicameral system were killed in committee in other legislatures, most members contending that no action should be taken until the Nebraska experiment had demonstrated its usefulness.

The Nebraska single-house legislature was created under the terms of a constitutional amendment adopted by the voters of the State in 1934. Since then, widespread interest in the unicameral system has been evidenced. Creation of single-chamber legislatures was recommended by Gov. Moeur of Arizona and the late Gov. Olson of Minnesota in 1935 and by Gov. Curley of Massachusetts in 1936.

Adoption of a unicameral legislative system in Maryland was recommended this year by the State commission on governmental efficiency and economy, as one of the first steps toward reorganization of the State government to provide "more effective and less costly services." The commision advocated the creation of a single chamber with members elected by the proportional representation method from the State at large. A new constitution for Maryland, recently proposed by H. L. Mencken, provided for a single-house "legislative council" of 15 members, to be elected for five-year terms from the State at large. A unicameral legislature was recommended for Pennsylvania in a report issued last year by the local government commission, composed of members of the State assembly.

THE NEBRASKA legislature was in session 98 days this year, as compared with 110 days in 1935, when the bicameral legislature held its final session. A total of 581 bills and resolutions were introduced, and of these, 210, or 36 per cent, were enacted. In the 1935 session, out of 1,056 bills and resolutions introduced, only 192, or 18 per cent, were enacted. The cost of the 1937 session was about 140,000, as compared with $202,600 for the 1935 session.

Major action taken by the Nebraska legislature during this year's session included adoption of a resolution opposing enactment by Congress of President Roosevelt's plan for reorganization of the Federal judiciary and rejection of the Federal child labor amendment. The legislature enacted an unemployment compensation law and a "fair trade" law sanctioning resale price maintenance contracts. An expiring mortgage moratorium law was extended for two years, and the State railway commission was given power to regulate trucking. A trade-practice code for automobile dealers also was enacted.

The legislature defeated a measure proposing a return to the bicameral system, as well as a long-range pay-as-you-go public works program proposed by Gov. Cochran. A proposal for consolidation of major power facilities in the State, advocated by Senator Norris, was killed in committee.

* * * *

MOST OBERVERS expressed the view that this year's session indicated that the Nebraska system was neither an unqualified success nor a failure. Critics pointed to the lack of legislative leadership and the increase in lobbying as the most objectionable features of the experiment.

Under the Nebraska plan, the 43 legislators are elected on a nonpartisan ballot, while the governor is elected on a party ticket. It was this arrangement which was largely responsible for the lack of leadership. Although elected on a party platform with partisan committments, the governor had no party to lead in the legislature. Leadership was divided among chairmen of the more important committees. Observers pointed out that this arrangement produced confusion. Replying to this criticism, Senator Norris said:

"To get away from partisan leadership is, to a great extent, to eliminate the ability of machine politicians to control the legislature. We want to get rid of party leadership. We want to divorce the legislative proceedings entirely from party promises, deceptions and intrigues."

Norris held that the increase in lobbying was more apparent than real. "Lobbyists under the new system were compelled to appear publicly," he said.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Our 1937 Fresh Air Fund.

This column today sounds its annual Fresh Air Fund appeal, the proceeds to be used this summer to send harassed business men and industrialists away for a little rest and sunshine. Special attention will be shown Republican business men, whose plight is particularly pathetic. Would you help bring a smile back to the drawn faces of America's employers? Do you wish to do your part to restore hope to the life of a tired business man? Then send in your mite now!

* * * *

These sufferers will be sent to the seaside or country in carload lots beginning tomorrow, July 10. It will cost about $50 per load, including transportation, two full weeks in the open, food, toys, etc. (This low cost is due to the fact all business men are in such shape they can't eat much anyhow and are so accustomed to being shoved around that they don't mind being packed tightly into freight cars.)

* * * *

Think of it! For two full weeks an American business man can live unharassed and unpersecuted! For half a month he can enjoy the unique experience of being treated as if he were an honest man! Fourteen days without being called a crook, a corrupt old bum, a contemptible Tory or an exploiter!

* * * *

Two dollars will outfit a business man with a playsuit, a pail and shovel, a lollipop and put him aboard a train. Four dollars will add a pair of bathing trunks and see him safely to camp. Five dollars will keep him several days and allow him cream in his coffee. Won't you help?

* * * *

"Dear Sir:

"I received the news today that I would be taken away from it all via your Fresh Air Fund and I am too moved for words. Before the news came I was in a state of deep despair. The color had gone from my face. I jumped at sudden noises. I had delusions of being surrounded by hundreds of women named Perkins. Bricks were flying everywhere. Then came the news I would be taken away into the country for two weeks and I was a changed man.

"The realization that anybody gave a damn about me was alone sufficient to bring me happiness. Bless you!

Photos Reveal Ford Employes Beat C.I.O. Men

Witnesses Identify Workers in 24 Pictures of Dearborn Riot.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 8.—Over objections of Ford Motor Co. attorneys, the National Labor Relations Board placed 24 photographs of rioting at Ford's Dearborn, Mich., plant into the record today at a hearing on its complaint charging the company with unfair labor practices.

The pictures showed United Automobile Workers of America leaders who went to the plant May 26 to supervise distribution of handbills being beaten by men identified by witnesses as Ford employes.

Most of them were introduced during the testimony of two photographers, James Kilpatrick, of the Detroit News, and Bede Irvin, of the Associated Press. Both men said efforts were made to take their plates away from them after they photographed the riot in which more than a dozen U. A. W. A. workers were injured.

The photographers and reporters assigned to cover the fighting occupied the witness stand throughout the third day of the N. L. R. B. hearing.

Victory Beresford, Detroit News reporter, told the examiner that "every place you looked you saw somebody being kicked around by four or five people."

He and Herbert Bauer, photographer, said more than a score of men they described as "hoodlums" were in automobiles parked near the riot scene a few hours before the fighting started.

Kilpatrick testified he saw a colored workman hit a woman handbill distributor in the abdomen.

Robert Lablonde, United Press reporter, said that while Richard T. Frankensteen, union organizational director, was being beaten "so severely I didn't think he would ever get up again," two mounted Dearborn policemen nearby were "looking the opposite way."

The fighting started on a highway overpass near gate 4 of the Ford plant after Frankensteen and Walter Reuther were ordered off the bridge. Laurence A. Knapp, labor board attorney, asked Irvin if the union leaders made any reply to the order to leave.

"No," Irvin testified. "They simply started to walk toward the stairs. When they had gone 6 or 8 feet, one of the group struck Frankensteen from behind."

Beresford said he saw Reuther "being thrown down the stairs."

Wreck Is Identified As Ill-Fated Plane Of Kingsford-Smith

Akron, Ohio, July 8 (AP).—A tire, wheel and broken landing gear found floating in the Andaman Sea off Burma have been identified as part of the plane of Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, famous Australian aviator missing since November, 1935, the B. F. Goodrich Co. announced today.

A photograph of the tire, plainly showing factory numerals, was forwarded to the Goodrich company, and the Lockheed Aircraft Co. identified the numbers as those of one of the tires on Kingsford-Smith's American-built plane, Goodrich officials said.

N. M. Andrews, of Moulmein, Burma, forwarded the photograph and details of the discovery to the United States. Kingsford-Smith was believed to have gone down in a severe storm on a London-Australia flight.

Blandford Cited For 'Irregularity'

Richmond, Va., July 8 (AP).—An audit report on the official accounts of Paul S. Blandford, superintendent of the Virginia Industrial School for Boys, informed Gov. Peery today that "there was an apparent irregular handling of State funds."

The report, made by State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs, said further it "questioned the propriety" of the private use by the superintendent of about $635 of State funds.

While certain of the expenditure methods were "questioned," Downs pointed out that all funds had been accounted for.

"We desire to report that all of the matters pertaining to the financial transactions of the school were carried as a matter of record on the books of the institution and all funds accounted for," Downs reported to the Governor.

First Lady Defends Greenbelt Project

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt took issue yesterday with Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, who has charged excessive spending at Greenbelt, Md., the Government's suburban development for low-income groups.

The First Lady told reporters:

"I see nohting to be ashamed of in the fact that the Government spends money to find a way to make living better for people in rural, suburban or city areas."

Experiments, she said, almost always have to be paid for, either in government or business. But nobody gets up and says it's outrageous, she observed, when institutions like Purdue University spend tremendous sums for experiments in the new field of housing.

Otto von Hapsburg Bides Time To Take Over Austrian Reins

(This is a glimpse of serious-minded young Archduke Otto von Hapsburg, pretender to the thrones of Austria and Hungary and a factor in the politics of Middle Europe. It was obtained by Louis Matzhold, Associated Press staff writer, on a visit to Otto's castle in exile.—Editor's note.)

By Louis Matzhold.

Steenockerzeel, Belgium, July 8.—Handsome Otto von Hapsburg is ready, even to the smallest detail of royal decrees and proclamations, to take over the government of Austria when and if "his day" comes.

Every action, every thought of the industrious young archduke, pretender to the Hapsburg thrones of Austria and Hungary, is directed confidentially toward that day. He has been trained for most of his 24 years to expect it.

Close associates here in his Belgian castle say Otto needs only to fill in the dates, affix the Hapsburg seal and the royal decrees will be ready to be slapped on the doors of Vienna's chancellory restoring the ancient Hapsburg monarchy.

Austrian legitimists believe loyal Viennese, shouting "Heil" and "Hoch," will then make ready for another golden Hapsburg age in the valley of the Danube.

Waits in Medieval Castle.

In the meantime, Otto must wait and keep busy. He does both well, surrounded by his miniature court in exile.

Inside Steenockerzeel's tree-fringed 30 acres, the archduke is "Kaiser Otto," ruler over a court as exacting in its etiquette and as obedient in its allegiance as was the Viennese court in the old days.

Otto's mother, raven-haired and able Zita, is as much an empress today as she was when she and Charles I ruled Austria-Hungary for a few eventful years before the dynasty crumbled in 1918. She is an extremely busy woman, mother of eight lusty children and a respected advisor to monarchist leaders. But court life revolves around one figure, "the kaiser."

Brothers and sisters stand at attention when he approaches. Even his mother calls him "your majesty" and arises when he enters a room.

Young Hapsburgs Frivolous.

Occasionally some of the younger Hapsburgs spill out of the canoes they paddle around the moat. Often a gardener has to fish a dripping archduchess or archduke out of the pond. But this indecorous fun is not for staid Otto.

To a surprising degree he has taken over the affars of his large family, its branches reaching into many parts of Europe. He is interpreter and executor of the Hapsburg family law, a private code, which has been kept partly secret for 800 years.

Monarchist advisers who have come from Austria to "instruct" his majesty have been jolted to discover themselves in collision with a resolute will. Otto von Hapsburg inherits the eight centuries of inflexible resolve and patience that have marked his kin.

Events in Steenockerzeel Castle move precisely as the youthful head of the household prescribes. He arises at 6 a. m. By 7:30 he is at his desk, scanning probably from 50 to 100 letters. He has had breakfast and has attended mass in the castle chapel.

Gets Crank Letters.

Most of his correspondence is with monarchist leaders. The mail, however, frequently brings crank letters—many from Germany of late—but they are not regarded seriously. Almost daily Otto grants audiences, usually to deputations from southeastern Europe, but sometimes to diplomats.

The noon dinner is rigidly formal. All members of the royal family, including the Empress, must be standing at their places when the pretender enters the dining room. They bow to him as a liveried servant opens the door. Otto recites a prayer and the meal begins.

Conversation is discouraged. Otto inquires of his mother's morning activities. That is all. The younger archdukes and archduchesses know they are to be seen and not heard.

Afternoon Audiences.

After an early afternoon respite—a 40-minute walk in summer and ice skating in the winter—audiences are resumed in Otto's little study. Typewriters clatter again in the adjutant's adjacent office. Administrative work is split into two divisions, Austrian and Hungarian.

At supper time Otto relaxes as completely as an austere Hapsburg can. Brothers and sisters may talk. Later, in the reception room adjoining the family dining room, the radio is turned on.

But Otto goes back to work. After an hour with his family he sees his adjutants. During this period, usually, he signs his reports. Then, when he is alone, he writes at his own typewriter.

Sometimes he keeps writing until time for the news broadcast and bed.

Ohio Group Buys Salisbury Papers

Salisbury, Md., July 8 (AP).—The Salisbury Times, a daily, and the Wicomico News, a weekly, appeared today under new ownership. Alfred T. Truitt and Charles J. High Hat Aims At Service, Fun For Its Patrons

By Chanticleer

Things are done in a grand manner at the High Hat—if you get what we mean. Our idea of the grand manner, when applied to night spots, is a combination of service and surroundings, plus sparkling entertainment. They have both at the High Hat and the result is one of the things that brings the patrons back for more. Funny, how far a little attention from the waiter goes in making a guest feel, not only comfortable, but really at ease. And then when you can be at ease with such a delectable mint julep as served at this popular spot, why stay home?

From Shanghai to Ceylon, from Hollywood to New York, Harris and Yvonne Ashburn have been tops. Critics say of them, "They start where others stop"—that's how finished, how clever, their dancing is executed. Harris and Yvonne are starring at the Shoreham Terrace this week, and although they have played in practically every other capital in the world, this is their first appearance in Washington.

Guests at the Terrace have been interested in a huge cape of black metal covered with sequins which Yvonne wears. Barnee, leader of the band, swears it weighs more than 35 pounds. Yvonne says it's a little trinket she picked up in Shanghai. Observers at the Terrace have not missed the Texas Rockets, nine darling bombshells of pulchritude and Terpsichore from the Dallas Centennial, who are appearing in the Shoreham Terrace floor show. And frequenters of the Terrace also are taking in the One-to-Two Club in the cocktail porch, after Terrace hours in the wee early morning.

The Crystal Team, a tap and acrobatic dance combination, joins the floor show at the Boulevard Farms this week to add to an already fine show. Phil Lorra and his men of melody give vent to their musical inclinations in a rhythmic manner that is decidedly inviting and interesting (have you tried the chicken dinner?).

Beverly Stull is the name . . . it's all out . . . the mystery is solved . . . remember this column told you that an addition was expected at the Mayfair . . . now we give the name of the new star entertainer at the Cafe of All Nations . . . the sweet young lass is an accompanist and song stylist . . . and from the picture of her appearing on this page . . . you don't have to take our word for the fact that she's a pretty young lady. . . . See you Monday night . . . which is the first night of her appearance at the Mayfair.

Johnny Shaw recently returned from his trip to New York completely satisfied on a number of things that were bothering him regarding the manner in which certain name bands in that city operate. His beaming smile again is resting peacefully on his fiddle as he directs the lads at the Madrillon, and everything is going fine. Al Spieldock, the Madrillon's drummer, is on his vacation and during the interim his duties are being assumed by Buddy Harmon, from the Mayflower lounge. Al, you know, has taken to smoking cigars and many are of the opinion that the vacation is merely a needed rest from the effects of an over-potent cigar. In passing, this spot still is serving the food for which it is famous, and with the air conditioning, plus the pleasant surroundings, what more could a particular patron of the arts demand when seeking food for the inner man or solace on a night when the world looks blue.

Boys and girls, let this warning sink clear into the old noggin. The Nightingale, located on the Richmond highway, only 3 miles south of Alexandria, has got just the combination for which you have been waiting. Watson Powell and his ten-piece orchestra, "Moods in Blue," recently has moved into this place and what those boys can't do with sheet music is not worth the trouble doing. They play it low or play it hot, or play it with a swing that will get you up from your table in a hurry. The floor at the Nightingale is large and plenty smooth. Now then, there is a nifty band, there is a swell floor and look at the prices . . . they're absolutely within the average couple's reach. We'll make the assertion that you have got a jimdandy place to spend a swell evening and Host Nightingale will tear the place down and sell it for cordwood if you don't leave there with that impression.

The King Cole Room at the Claridge Hotel (that's the place where the old planter pulls his punches) located at 820 Connecticut avenue, continues to attract a goodly crowd night after night. Inquiring into the reasons for such popularity our scout handed in his detailed report last week and his findings indicate that the songstress, Rippling-Eyed Joan English and Ward DuVall, who also sings, are two of the many reasons why patrons keep coming back to this delightfully cool spot. Our scout also made mention of the refreshments and expressed himself as highly elated at the invigorating ingredients which the shakerman pours into his concoctions.

Looking for something new, something different, and something with a definite and decided kick to it in the line of entertainment? Well, if you are here is the answer to your problems. Over in the southeast section of town is located one of the city's most colorful night clubs. It's Brinkley's and you'll find it at 533 Eighth street. You've heard of the place and we have told you about it time and again, yet the nightery does have a peculiar atmosphere all of its own that makes it distinctive in the night club line. So some night when time is hanging heavy on your hands and you are just buzzing around wishing that you had somewhere to go and something to do after you got there, turn the old buggy Brinkley-bound and if you don't enjoy yourself it will be in spite of combined efforts of the management and the music of Carl Gunther and his band.

Jury Is Given Case Of Pastor Charged With Slaying Wife

Beckley, W. Va., July 8 (AP).—A jury took the case of the Rev. Monta H. Ball today to consider whether the 38-year-old hill preacher deliberately shot his pretty second wife or killed her by accident as he claimed.

Defense Attorney H. G. Shaffer declared in the closing argument the State had not proved a charge of murder, "not even manslaughter."

Speaking of the accusations made by the State after 29-year-old Mrs. Victory Gay Ball was killed by a shotgun last March 5, Shaffer told the jury:

"The State would have you believe the Rev. Mr. Ball loved his wife so much he killed for jealousy and loved her so little he shot her for a $2,500 insurance policy."

Prosecutor W. A. Thornhill and his assistant, W. H. McGinnis, reiterated the State's contention the mountain minister killed both for jealousy and the desire for money.

Studies Caused Colored Youth to Quit Annapolis

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, said yesterday Midshipman George J. Trivers, colored, resigned from the Naval Academy Saturday because he found he could not do a midshipman's work. Trivers was appointed to the Academy several months ago by Representative Mitchell, who is the only colored Member of Congress.

Officials of the Navy Department yesterday indicated resignation of Trivers, which was accepted by Secretary Swason Wednesday, was accompanied by a letter from the colored Naval student's mother, stating she needed him at home and urging him to resign.

After a talk with Capt. Forde A. Todd, acting academy superintendent, the Congressman said there had been no unpleasantness surrounding Trivers' resignation. Mitchell investigated Trivers' case because another colored youth he appointed to the academy, James L. Johnson, jr., was "railroaded out of it," he said.

Poles Fight Moving Of Marshal's Body

Warsaw, July 8 (AP).—The dispute between the Polish government and the Roman Catholic Church over the removal of Marshal Josef Pilsudski's body from its crypt remained unsettled tonight. The Archbishop of Krakow yesterday sent a letter to President Ignace Moscicki, apologizing for transfer of the body from Krakow Cathedral to a bell tower.

But tonight a government communique said the president found the archbishop's letter did not conform to an agreement between Foregin Minister Josef Beck and the Papal Nuncio to Poland. Therefore, said the communique, the dispute is not settled and the president has instructed the cabinet to take "appropriate measures."

Polar Skies Overcast.

On the Air Today

When this desk receives a press release or a handout from the large network's press department, we look for the never-before-used-this-year words "exclusive broadcast." The release is usually about some special feature that one or the other chain has signed for its own private exploitation. The feud between the rival networks is very recent and the special events boys snoop around the country signing up the Boonesville Marble Stakes Championship for an exclusive broadcast on their chain or the Googey Boogey Hog-Calling Contest, etc. Recently out in Milwaukee, the National Broadcasting Co. announced to all radio editors that the description of the running of the annual A. A. U. track meet was to be an "exclusive broadcast" of that chain.

"Not so," said Ted Husing, ace Columbia sports commentator, "Not so."

From atop the Apostle's Lutheran Church located outside the Marquette University Stadium, where the meet was held, Ted Husing and Jimmy Dolan, with the aid of a pair of highpowered field glasses and a microphone gave the listeners of the Columbia Broadcasting Co. a pretty accurate account of the events. This, we take it, is retaliation for N. B. C.'s steal of the Columbia's "exclusive" broadcast from the scene of the recent Poughkeepsie regatta.

• • • •

For his coverage at the Spanish front last September, when he took his microphone on the field of battle, H. V. Kaltenborn, C. B. S. commentator, will be awarded a plaque at the National Headquarters Frolic in Atlantic City tomorrow. Awards for the best domestic radio reporting go to Joseph Eaton and W. L. Coulson of WHAS, Louisville, for January flood coverage.

• • • •

The Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, former Vicar of St. Paul's, Darlington, England, will present an "exclusive" spiritual broadcast over WOL from 9 to 9:30 tonight. The Rev. Jardine is the clergyman who several weeks ago performed the wedding ceremony for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. This marks the first time he will appear before the radio microphone and he has chosen as his topic "The Spiritual in Our Every Day Life."

• • • •

The Englishman, enjoying his Friday afternoon cup of tea, will hear the program, "Five Hours Back," which originates at N. B. C.'s short-wave station, W3XAL, at Bound Brook. This summer program, which begins today, last year was voted the most popular program received from abroad by the English. It was estimated by a London newspaper that more than ten million listeners, not only in the British Isles, but on the Continent, regularly heard the program. Carol Weymann, Floyd Sherman and the Cavaliers Quartet will appear with Dr. Black and his N. B. C. Symphony Orchestra. WMAL will carry the program at 1:30 p. m.

• • • •

Representative Vincent L. Palmisano, of Maryland, will speak at the American Automobile Association's advisory board luncheon this afternoon at 1 o'clock over WRC. His topic is "Taxation and other District Matters."

• • • •

Tom Manning, who was in Washington Wednesday for the broadcast of the all-star baseball game has left for Cleveland, where he will do a novelty stunt in the description of the grand circuit trotting race, which takes place this afternoon. Tom will don the colors of the famous driver, Billy Andrews, and enter the special race together with some of the foremost drivers of the grand circuit. From this vantage point in his racing sulky he will give an account of the race. Here's hoping he's far enough back in the race so that he can describe the boys in front of him. WRC, at 4 p. m.

• • • •

Other features:

11 a. m.—WJSV. Summaries of the Open Golf Championships.

2 p. m.—WJSV. The Washington-New York baseball game described by Arch McDonald.

6:15 p. m.—WOL. Five Star Final.

7:45 p. m.—WOL. "Let's Play Games," a new program designed to bring the parlor into the studio. This program will be heard weekly and under the direction of Jane Martin.

8 p. m.—WJSV. Francis Lederer and Madeline Carroll will present a preview of scenes from the new film "It's All Yours," on the Hollywood Hotel program. Others on the show are Jerry Cooper, Francis Langford, Anne Jamison, Igor Gorin and Raymond Paige's orchestra.

8 p. m.—WMAL. The Cincinnati Summer Opera will present "La Boheme."

Here and there . . . Babe Ruth and Walter Johnson were rehearsing the Bambino's regular show at the studio of WJSV, this past Wednesday, when the Babe was here to see the All-star baseball game . . . and as we watched from the control room . . . wondered whether Walter thought he would ever meet up with the mightiest batterer of all time in a radio studio . . . they seemed to belong on the diamond . . . but it's a good show . . . Raymond Paige, music director for "Hollywood Hotel," has discovered that Beethoven, when he wrote his Fifth Symphony, must have been clairvoyant . . . his opening theme, the unison passage that marks the work without a doubt as Beethoven's Fifth, is, according to Paige, the Morse Code signal for five . . . dot dot dot dash . . .

SHEROLD ANDREWS

Sherold Andrews, of 1507 Isherwood Place Northeast, has served The Washington Post to his subscribers four years. He is captain of his Newspaper Boys of America team. He is a Junior at Eastern High School. His ambition is to become an engineer, and his favorite sports are swimming and golf.

Zealous Scout Hands Paper To First Lady

The "alligator" reported to have been presented to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt by a St. Petersburg, Fla., Boy Scout as she and the President rode by national jamboree troops yesterday developed upon investigation to be nothing more than a copy of a St. Petersburg newspaper.

J. T. Burdine, jr., St. Petersburg Scout, who was reported to have stepped out of line to hand the "alligator" to Mrs. Roosevelt, said the reptile was safely in a cage in the jamboree camp at the time.

To complicate the incident, Hunter Dunn, another St. Petersburg Scout, said it was he and not Burdine who broke from the Florida troop as it stood at attention to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Dunn said the "package" he presented to Mrs. Roosevelt was nothing more than a rolled up souvenir edition of a St. Petersburg paper.

"I went up to the President's and Mrs. Roosevelt's car and called out, 'Greetings from St. Petersburg,' and as soon as I handed the paper to Mrs. Roosevelt some big fellows jumped down on top of me and pushed me back in line," Dunn said, explaining the incident.

He said Mrs. Roosevelt smiled and waved at him.

Panama Canal Tonnage At New Yearly Peak

Balboa, Canal Zone, July 8 (AP).—Panama Canal authorities announced today more cargo was taken through the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific side in the fiscal year ended June 30 than in any previous year.

The total was 9,895,632 tons, which was 22,103 tons more than in the previous peak year, 1929. The increase was ascribed largely to heavy scrap-metal shipments to the Orient. Freight taken through the canal in both directions totaled 28,103,375 tons.

Staging Review, Parade for Chief Brings Thrill to 27,000 Scouts

Post Special Jamboree Reporter.

Yesterday morning some 27,000 Boy Scouts were reviewed by their honorary president, Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Amid cheers and waves of this vast assemblage, the President rode from the Capitol to the White House, while the Scouts lined Constitution avenue from the Capitol to the Arena grounds. It was a beautiful day for the parade and review.

JACK PARKER.

Jamboree officials figured to the minute the organization of the boys, and just when and at what time each group of Scouts would assemble. Not only this, but they also had figured at what minute the President would pass each section of the mile-long line of eager boys.

James E. West, national president of the Boy Scouts of America, had a private seat in a box directly across the avenue from the Department of Commerce.

Like Well-Trained Army.

Not only at the Department of Commerce, but from all buildings along the avenue, people could be seen hanging out windows for a glimpse of the spectacle.

The Scouts first staged a parade of their own, as they went to their stand along the Avenue. They looked like a well-trained army as they marched along with the blaring of the many bands, and every fellow looking his best and keeping step with all the rest.

Fourteenth and Constitution avenue was the best spot to witness this once-in-a-lifetime event. The boys from Hains Point and the Sea Scout ships marched up Fourteenth and there turned right, continuing on the Avenue. The boys from West Potomac Park came up the Avenue from Eighteenth street, where they had formed. Scouts from Columbia Island came to the District via the Lincoln Memorial Bridge and formed along the upper part of the Avenue.

Sea Scouts Great.

The most attention was attracted by the Sea Scouts.—And, I mean to tell you that they really looked neat. With their black and spotless white uniforms, they were tops. Their marching was uniform, and they held perfect attention while doing a movement.

After waiting what must have seemed to the eagerest of the fellows ages, the Presidential party was seen way down the Avenue. The group moved slowly, and seemed to be making no headway whatsover—but it got there eventually.

The President was escorted by six motorcycle policemen and several cars of Secret Service men.

Mr. Roosevlt looked healthy and fine as he smiled broadly, waving a white panama hat in his right hand. He sat on one side of his car so that he could see more closely his admirers.

He was trailed by about 15 cars full of dignitaries and officials.

The President's car passed Dr. West's stand at about 10:45 and proceeded directly to the White House.

Needless to say, he was cheered lustily by all the assemblage as he passed each section.

Dan Beard, well known to every Boy Scout, a member of the national executive board of the Boy Scouts of America, was not far behind Mr. Roosevelt, and was also waving his hat, a 10-gallon sombrero.

Immediately after this, the boys broke their orderly and neat ranks to go back to camp and hungrily await the noon mess.

President Roosevelt has reviewed the ranks of the Nation's "Soldiers of Peace."

Puerto Rican Boys Get Winship Flag

Ma. Gen. Blanton Winship, Governor of Puerto Rico, presented an American flag yesterday to the 12 Puerto Rican youths who attended the Jamboree. The ceremonies took place at Washington Monument shortly after Gen. Winship's arrival by plane from San Juan.

The presentation was attended by Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, and Dr. Ernest J. Gruening, director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, Interior Department.

The flag was presented as a "symbol of the American citizenship enjoyed by the people of Puerto Rico and in recognition of the splendid work of character building being accomplished by the Boy Scout organization."

45,000 Make Warplanes.

Rome, July 8 (AP).—Fascist statisticians disclosed tonight Italy now has 45,000 men producing military airplanes, not including the 25,000 workmen engaged in 60 airports under construction.

Research Expert Tells Club How Scouting Builds Character

How scouting aids boys in developing character was graphically described yesterday by Dr. H. W. Hurt, director of research for Boy Scouts of America. Dr. Hurt spoke before the Cosmopolitan Club at its luncheon meeting at the Carlton, being introduced by William Edelblut, chairman of the forum committee.

In honor of the presence of the Scout Jamboree in Washington, Arthur W. Defenderfer, president of the club, set yesterday aside as "Boy Scout day." Accompanying Dr. Hurt was Linn C. Drake, Scout executive, District of Columbia division.

The speaker asserted that no one can build character for a boy. He must develop it himself. He can be aided in this development by being placed in the proper environment and being directed along proper lines. This, the speaker said, is the aim of scouting.

The five fundamental points of character building, as Dr. Hurt described them, are habits, attitudes, standards, ideals and purposes. Each one of these, he said, is associated with activities and hence the Scout program is one of contindal activities, something to keep the boy busy and intent on accomplishing something.

Dr. Hurt praised Washington for the reception it has given the Boy Scout Jamboree and the entertainment that has been afforded the boys while here. He called attention to the character of the boy found among the Scouts and declared that upon the training and educatoin bestowed upon this group depends the future of the United States.

Boy Scout City Will Be Razed By Sept. 15th

Demolition to be Started on Monday By 200 Workmen.

Two hundred workmen, under direction of Ray Bryan, assistant director of engineering of the Boy Scouts Association, will begin the task of demolishing the 350-acre Jamboree city at 8 a. m. Monday, it was announced yesterday.

The encampment will be obliterated as systematically as it was constructed. One crew will strike canvas, others will remove shower houses, dismantle electrical fixtures, lines and telephones, denail and unbolt solid structures and collect such miscellaneous gear as garbage cans, dishpans, mops, brooms and other implements furnished each of the 780 troops.

The 2 miles of water lines which were specially laid to provide the tented community with 1,000,000 gallons daily will be removed inside two weeks, Bryan asserted.

First areas to be cleared will be the Avenue of Flags, the general headquarters section west of Washington Monument, the arena grandstands north of the Monument and the upper portion of East Potomac Park, where several thousand boys have been encamped since late June.

Razing headquarters will be the old Jamboree construction camp near Washington Airport, which will be reoccupied Monday morning. Used equipment will be placed on sale nearby.

September 15 has been set as the deadline for completion of demolition operations. The task of resodding the grounds will begin at once and be carried on until the Jamboree areas on Columbia Island, in East and West Potomac parks and along the Mount Vernon highway have been restored to their original condition.

Leveling of the synthetic village which has been home to 27,000 Scouts and leaders since they came to Washington, will be paid for out of the $25 registration fees and from the sale of used equipment.

"When the Jamboree office finally closes this September," said Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, residents of the District will have experienced an encampment and mobilization of boyhood in the Capital City which will not have cost them, their Government nor their businessmen a cent in the form of extra taxes, requests for donations, advertising or for similar financial assistance."

School Official Defends Teacher Asked to Quit

Saugus, Mass., July 8 (AP).—A school committeeman tonight took up the cudgels for blonde Miss Isabelle Hallin, who has been "invited" to resign her teaching post in the Saugus High School.

Paul A. Haley, who, with Chairman George A. McCarrier, voted to retain Miss Hallin, announced he had demanded of the chairman a special board meeting immediately for a public hearing of the case against the 26-year-old woman.

The charges never have been aired, but Miss Hallin declared they related to "rumors" she had given students cocktails. She branded the "rumors" as "nonsense."

Youth Group Honors Admiral Richard Byrd

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 8 (AP).—The International Youth's distinguished service citation was conferred tonight upon Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

The presentation was made by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor and the World's Christian Endeavor Union, at the thirty-sixth international convention.

Fire Fighters Welcome Rain For Jamboree

It's been a quiet Jamboree for Engine Company No. 32, the camp's official firefighting unit, quartered near the Tidal Basin boathouse.

Commanded by Capt. Clement Murphy and staffed by 16 firemen working on three shifts, the station has answered only four alarms in ten days. Two of these were calls from outside the Jamboree grounds. The two "legitimate" occasions turned out to be trivial tent blazes where damage was negligible.

Plans for handling a serious call were developed in which, upon the dispatching of the Jamboree company's two engines to any section, an uptown company would be sent to the camp to fill in. The replacement would consist of a battalion chief, three engine companies, a truck and rescue squad wagon.

His men have enjoyed the unusual assignment, Capt. Murphy said, adding:

"The rain has been a blessing in disguise."

It is known, he pointed out, awnings and tents are quickly ignited in hot weather and frequent rainfall reduces the hazard.

Those attached to the special company were:

Lieut. I. W. Luskey, a 23-year veteran, who was called back from furlough for the deail; Capt. R. E. S. Boso, A. M. Piel, R. F. Sutphin, G. M. K. Cook, R. H. Hooper, J. H. Chrisman, A. C. Dansereau, T. C. Davis, G. C. Bowie, Sergt. Clarence Quick, E. J. Heiss, H. J. Cressman, S. C. Johnson and A. O. Rauder.

D. C. Scout Guides Conducted 4,800 Jamboree Tours

Staffed completely by Scouts from the District of Columbia Council, which includes 14 adjoining counties in Maryland Virginia, the service was extended without pay of any kind other than the thanks of the youths who were guided through Arlington, the downtown Federal buildings and Capitol Hill.

One guide was assigned to each troop of 36 Scouts. Operated in morning and afternoon shifts, there were four main guide stations on Columbia Island, Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue, Lincoln Memorial and Capitol Hill.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Harry F. Byrd was host yesterday at luncheon for 175 Virginia Boy Scouts attending the national Jamboree.

The Senator, assisted by his office staff and Represetatives Burch, Robertson and Drewry, received the boys in the caucus room of the Senate Office Building. Senator Byrd distributed autographed copies of a pamphlet describing the history and points of interest about the Capitol Building.

The Scouts then were taken down stairs, where buffet luncheon was served.

De Valera Has Loyal Supporter In Wellesley Boy Scout Troop

Belfast Oxonian Discovers This to His Sorrow as He Supports British Domination of Irish Free State.

Tall, handsome Marc Kelly MacNeir, of the Wellesley, Mass., Boy Scout troop, is playing safe—at least as far as the "good people" are concerned.

Each night as darkness clothes his "city of tents," he fills a pail of water and leaves it on his tent stoop to assuage the "spirits."

"It's an old custom with our troop," Marc explained. "You see, we are the 'leprechaun patrol.'"

A leprechaun, according to Irish folklore, is a tricky old man, who, if caught, may reveal the hiding place of treasure.

Marc's troop prides itself on being more Irish than the Irish themselves. At least Marc demonstrated that yesterday when he took issue with a Belfaster on the outcome of the Irish elections.

The Belfaster spoke with an Oxonian accent. To him Ireland was a part of the Commonwealth of British Nations. Marc resented this. He resented more the Belfaster's slur on De Valera.

"It frightens me," Marc said with disgusted finality. "It frightens me to think of what I would like to do to you."

St. Patrick's Day, the leprechaun patrol flew the Irish Free State flag, which is something, considering only two of the patrol members are Irish.

"How did you get away with it?" Marc was asked.

"How did we?" Marc's tone was more than faintly impatient. "I'll tell you. We bought some shillelaghs and we saw that it stayed up."

400 Militiamen To Entrain for Summer Camp

50 Trucks to Carry Unit to Fort Story, Va., Tomorrow.

Nearly 400 District National Guardsmen, forming the first company of local militiamen to leave for summer training camp, will board Army trucks headed for Fort Story, Va., early tomorrow morning.

The cavalcade of more than 50 trucks will leave Water and O streets southwest at 6 a. m., according to Lieut. Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, assistant adjutant general of the D. S. National Guard.

The encampment will include men of the 260th Coast Artillery, Anti-aircraft. The corps will reach the camp, near Virginia Beach, late tomorrow afternoon, and the two-week schedule of drills and target practice will get under way Sunday.

Col. Walter W. Byrnes, commanding officer of the division, left Washington for Fort Story last night, and will direct preparations by an advance detachment which left Wednesday.

The second camp period for local guardsmen will begin August 4, when nearly 900 men, under Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding officer, take up quarters at Camp Ritchie, Cascades, Md.

Fidelity Bank Successor Deal Expected Soon

Closed Bank Shareholders Likely to Approve Reopening Plan.

An early opening of the new First Federal Savings & Loan Association to take over the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association and the restoration of 85 per cent of shareholders deposits appeared almost a certainty today following a conference yesterday between representatives of the office of of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Stating that the conference had reached an "agreement in principle," Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor announced that a proposal will be mailed shortly to the thousands of shareholders of Fidelity stock. The agreement, provides in part, that the previously announced plan to make 85 per cent of Fidelity shareholders deposits available, either in cash or insured shares in the new First Federal, will be submitted to shareholders.

A comprehensive statement of the plan will be prepared as soon as possible, it was announced, and the statement, in the form of a letter, will be mailed by the receiver of the Fidelity, within the next few days to each shareholder. The statement will explain every detail of the plan and it is believed that the shareholders will approve of this latest draft.

It also was announced that a contract will be submitted for court approval at a later date.

27,000 Scouts Stage Farewell Arena Display

Heat Dampens Cheers at Review by Roosevelt and Officials.

yesterday by the President along the 2-mile-long Constitution avenue route, from the Capitol to Lincoln Memorial. He was accompanied by Commissioner George E. Allen, chairman of his special Jamboree committee, and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The First Lady, following the example set by her husband the day before, made a brief inspection tour of the encampment late yesterday, devoting most of her time to viewing the reproduction of the Roosevelt family's Hyde Park mansion which impressed the President favorably.

Flags Lowered at 2:30.

Today's farewell program consists of reveille at 7 a. m., breakfast at 7:45, regional and sectional closing assemblies at 9:30, the final Jamboree meal at 12:30 p. m. and the closing retreat ceremony at 2:30 p. m., when all American and Scout troop flags in the encampment will be lowered simultaneously.

The grand national review by the President may have been, for program purposes, the high point of the Jamboree, but actually it was rendered anticlimactic, if not altogether unimpressive, by the intense heat. After standing on the torrid Constitution avenue asphalt for from 45 minutes to 2 hours, the Scouts were too weighted down with perspiration for stiff hand salutes or vociferous cheering as the White House car drove by.

Along most of the route the President was met by rather tired boys whose chief concern was to photograph their chief as he motored past. Their ranks were serried and many of the youths even dropped out to seek points of vantage.

Parade Lasts 22 Minutes.

It took the President and the score or so other cars in the parade only 22 minutes to cover the route, and the demonstration began on time—10:30 o'clock—but the Scouts' long wait resulted from the necessity of leaving their tents early in order to be placed properly along the avenue well in advance of the review.

The President's eldest son, James, rode in the front seat of his car, and occupants of the cars which followed included Secretaries Roper, Cummings, Hull, Morgenthau and Woodring; Marvin H. McIntyre and Stephen T. Early, of the White House secretariat; Col. Edwin Watson and Capt. Paul Bastedo, military and naval aides, respectively; Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff; Admiral W. D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, and District Commissioners Sultan and Hazen.

The modest cheering accorded President Roosevelt by the Scouts was matched, if not surpassed, by the noisy reception they gave "Uncle Dan" Beard, Chief Scout Executive James E. West and Chief Sea Scout Howard Gillette. The three leaders were perched upon the folded top of their open car, Walter W. Head, president of the Boy Scouts of America, was not in the parade, having left the Jamboree Tuesday to attend a convention in Mexico City.

Foreign Scouts Salute, Cheer.

Some 1,500 American, foreign and Scout flags were borne in the "stand-still parade." In many instances, they provided a means of amusement to the impatient Scouts, who passed the time by trying to "ring" their hats on the peaked tops of the staffs.

The President seemed highly interested in the foreign contingent of 400 youths representing every continent, all of whom saluted smartly and burst into cheers as his car came along.

Despite the high temperature, there were no heat prostrations among the Scouts, although three of them dropped out of line from exhaustion and received first-aid at the sectional hospital tent near Seventeenth street.

Buffalo Doctors Find Camphor Cures Insanity

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 8.—An "exceedingly promising" new treatment for dementia praecox, one of the most common and serious of mental diseases, was announced at Buffalo City Hospital today.

Describing the method as "well-nigh revolutionary," Dr. Samuel W. Hartwell, chief attending psychiatrist, said it consisted of injection into the blood stream of large doses of a specially prepared camphor solution.

Formal private announcement of the treatment, used here for the first time in America, was made in a paper read several weeks ago at the American Psychiatric Convention in Pittsburgh by Dr. Emerick Friedman, interning psychiatrist at the Buffalo hospital, who used the treatment under Dr. Hartwell's direction.

Dr. Hartwell said public announcement was withheld until today because doctors wished to be positive the treatment would have permanent benefit.

Of 40 patients who have undergone treatment, 80 per cent have been able to return to their homes and usual occupations, the doctor said.

Cab Driver Offers To Trade With Any Doomed to Death

Frankfort, Ky., July 8 (AP).—A Louisville man offered his life today for any man in the State under sentence of death, but Walter Mulbry, secretary to Gov. Chandler, said the law prevented such substitution.

A letter to the Governor said the applicant would "like to take the place of any man" who is to be executed, "and let him take my place."

Ray Peninger, 29-year-old cab driver, said at Louisville domestic troubles, poor health and job worry impelled him to make the offer.

Married and the father of 5 and 7 year old boys, he said he "just didn't feel like living any longer."

Wounded Man Held As Robbery Suspect

Baltimore, July 8 (AP).—Thomas Austin, Baltimore colored man, found bleeding from a bullet wound in the back early today, was charged with breaking into the Revere Copper & Brass Co. plant here.

Austin told police he had been shot in a fight in Washington. However, Emory Skipper, watchman at the plant, had reported earlier that he fired four shots at a man he discovered in the plant.

Earhart's Signals Are Puzzle To Capt. Koonce, Marine Flier

Capt. Allen C. Koonce, U. S. M. C., who was forced down in a land plane on the Pacific Ocean in September, 1932, and is now attached to the aircraft squadron of the fleet marine base at Quantico, Va., said yesterday he can't understand how Amelia Earhart is able to send radio signals as has been reported.

"I don't see where she gets the power to use her radio," Capt. Koonce asserted.

Stating he hoped Miss Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan will be rescued, Capt. Koonce explained that all Navy land planes are equipped with emergency provisions, water, rubber boats and flotation gear.

Saying that he presumed the Earhart plane likewise possessed emergency equipment, Capt. Koonce recalled his own experience while serving aboard the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Lexington. Attached to the V. S. 5, he was forced down in the Pacific when he ran out of gas. For four hours he floated off the coast of California in his land plane before he saw a tug on the horizon, which he signalled with smoke candles and a Very pistol which shoots flares.

With Capt. Koonce at the time was Capt. Albert D. Cooley, now attached to the Bureau of Aeronautics, Navy Department. Another member of the group, Capt. Koonce recalled, was Capt. Edward C. Dyer, United States Marine Corps, who is now on duty at the Naval Academy.

Land planes can make a very good landing on the water, Maj. Field Harris, now on duty in the Marine Corps aviation group in the Bureau of Aeronautics, Navy Department, said yesterday. Maj. Harris also served aboard the Lexington, but at a later time than the others.

"If Miss Earhart's plane is afloat," he declared, "the planes from the Lexington will find her."

Planes from the Lexington are forced down at sea from time to time, Maj. Harris said, but are almost invariably rescued. They are then overhauled, and put back into service with comparatively little difficulty, he stated.

Span Authority For State Asked

By the Associated Press.

Maryland's Senators Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radcliffe asked Congress yesterday to give the Maryland State Roads Commission authority to construct, maintain and operate several bridges across navigable streams.

The proposed bridges:

Across Potomac River, Charles County, to near Dahlgren, Va.; across Chesapeake Bay, Baltimore County, near Millers Island, to Kent County, near Tolchester, or as an alternate, across the Susquehanna River, Cecil County, near Perryville, to Harford County, Havre de Grace; and across Patapsco River, south of Baltimore City, to near Fairfield.

Senator Tydings also introduced a bill to authorize the George Washington Memorial Bridge Public Corporation to construct a bridge across the Potomac near Dahlgren, Va.

Bob Burns Says:

My Uncle Beany and Aunt Dutty were worried about their daughter, Lobelia, because she was 28 years old and hadn't shown any signs of pickin' out a career. Finally, one evening, they invited a famous psychologist out to dinner with 'em. After dinner the mother went into the kitchen and Lobelia went into the parlor and started playin' the piano and singing.

After awhile the psychologist went back into the kitchen and told Aunt Dutty "I think you'd better let your daughter take up music as a career—she's a born musician." Aunt Dutty says, "What makes you think that?" and the psychologist says, "Well, a girl that age has got to be awfully fond of music to be able to sit there and play and sing while her poor mother washes dishes!"

The unrest side of it:

The Committee Against False Economy (the militant group that shunted J. L. Lewis into the Government field) has asked the U. F. W. A. national office to concern itself in the Public Assistance Division case . . . The case, they say, results from "an economy move" . . . "The portion of the total District appropriation allotted to P. A. D. has been cut from 14 per cent to 10 per cent, resulting in a series of dismissals which are carried out on a different basis in each instance—some being dismissed through the application of Section 213, marriage clause of the 1932 economy act, some on the basis of seniority and some on other bases entirely."

S. E. C. Union Lodge has sent Secretary Wallace a resolution protesting the "anti-union attitude" of the Agriculture Department and requesting the reinstatement of Louis Matosoff, a recently dismissed clerk. Quoting the resolution, in part: "Mr. Matosoff was one of the most active members of the union (Agriculture 31) and was well known to the higher officials in the Department of Agriculture as a negotiator for the employes of the department" . . . "After a months' negotiation with subordinate officials in the department, the union has been refused a conference with Secretary Wallace" . . . This union protests the anti-union attitude of the Department of Agriculture in refusing to deal properly with Agriculture Lodge 31," and urges: "The immediate reinstatement of Mr. Matosoff; the elimination of anti-union letters from his personnel record, and "a thoroughgoing investigation into all the evidences of discrimination and anti-union policy existing in the Department of Agriculture."

Held Office 26 Years; Once Employed by the Post.

Patrick J. Haltigan, for 26 years reading clerk of the House of Representatives and one of Washington's best-loved figures, died last night in Washington Sanitarium after a long illness. He was 74 years old and lived at 2440 Sixteenth street northwest.

He did not become nationally known until the Democratic convetion in New York in 1924, when he read off on ballot after ballot the announcement of the State delegations, which for days began with "24 votes for Oscar Underwood."

A native of Ireland, Haltigan was educated in the Christian Brothers' School, and began life as a printer in New York.

In 1889 he came to Washington, where he worked in the composing room of The Washington Post in the days when most type was set by hand. He then went to the Government Printing Office.

Studied Law at Georgetown.

While he was a compositor he studied law and received his law degree from Georgetown University.

Leaving the Government service, he became editor and publisher of the National Hibernian, and he was chosen reading clerk in the House a decade later as the result of a competitive examination. This post he he held from 1911 until the time of his death.

Perhaps the most stirring of these came in April, 1917, when the House voted to declare war on Germany. There were countless occasions when he read measures that molded the destiny of the Nation.

Reappointed in 1919.

In 1919 Haltigan was reappointed reading clerk for general efficiency, and he was named reading clerk for the Democratic National Convention that nominated Cox and Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1920.

In the Catholic Church Haltigan achieved distinction. He was created a Papal Knight of St. Sylvester by Pope Pius XI on January 26, 1925. He was a past president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, a past state deputy supreme knight in the Knights of Columbus, and a past grand night of Carroll Council. He was a past president of the Archdiocesan Union of the Holy Name Society and a member of St. Paul's Church.

Known as Writer.

Haltigan also was known as a writer. He was author of "Haltigan's Manual of Ready Reference," historian of the Columbia Typographical Union for its first yearbook, issued in 1899, and publisher of "Haltigan's Irish in the American Revolution."

He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Elks.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Grady Haltigan, and ten children, Mrs. Fred F Plaehan, of Audubon, Iowa; John Emmett Haltigan, an attorney with the Veterans' Administration; Daniel G. Haltigan, and Mrs. Neil H. Dartmeier, of Detroit; Mrs. Edward Pugh, of Quantico, Va., wife of Capt. Edward Pugh, U. S. M. C.; Patrick J. Haltigan, jr., Miss Helen Agnes Haltigan, Joseph A. Haltigan and Mrs. James Farrell.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed late last night.

Radiophone Links Seattle, Alaska

The opening of a War Department operated radiotelephone service yesterday betwen Seattle, Wash., and Juneau, Alaska, was marked by conversations between Government and American Telephone & Telegraph Co. officials here and in Alaska, the War Department announced.

Made possible by connection at Seattle, Wash., of the land lines of the Bell System with the War Department radiotelephone channel to Juneau, Alaska, the new service constitutes an added means of communication between continental United States and the northern possession, it was pointed out.

The principal means of communication with the Territory has been the network of radio stations of the Alaska Communications System, it was stated. Direct communication between the United States and Alaska was first established in 1904, when service on the submarine cable between Seattle and Valdez and Seward, Alaska, was inaugurated.

Missing Fliers Could Subsist on Island Indefinitely, Says Hawaii Delegate, Former Explorer in South Seas

If Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, have landed on some remote atoll in the vast Pacific, as Samuel Wilder King, the delegate from Hawaii, has suggested, their scenery looks something like this, with crabs their food, brackish water their drink. King took the pictures.

By Scott Hart.

If Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, are stranded on one or another of the reefs that dot the South Seas, there is every probability they can sustain life until rescuers arrive, it is believed by Samuel W. King, Congressional delegate from Hawaii, who has sailed as a Navy officer the area where the Earhart search is centering.

How long human life might be maintained on one of these uninhabited pinpoints of coral and sand heaved up from the sea would depend on the endurance of the person, he thought.

But withal, the average person might easily live—and with not too severe results—until help arrived.

He did not think the element of thirst would be a threatening one. A stranded person might dig a short distance into the sand and encounter water. This would be brackish and unpalatable, but certainly would preserve life. Rains are not infrequent in the area, he added.

And the stranded person could eat—not a well-rounded meal, but food sufficient to sustain him a while. Most of these reefs, small islands, are good grounds for crabs. Witn primitive contrivances, a person also might bring in a catch of fish.

Many of the reefs, certainly the larger ones, have a covering of low-growing shrub, pigweed and some grass. These, the former Navy officer said, might be lighted as signals. For this use there also might be the driftwood that is sucked to the reefs' edge.

But great doubt exists among seafaring men as to the precise location of the reefs—upon any one of which the aviators might have alighted. He pointed to Winslow Reef (which has figured in the search news) as an example.

This reef, supposedly south of Baker Island—which is approximately 36 miles south of Howland Island, a projected landing point for the aviators—was first reported by a schooner master, Capt. Winslow, in 1851.

Since then there has been much speculation on whether Capt. Winslow actually saw a reef or whether he just thought he did while his vessel was sliding through a dreaming South Sea. Since then—in 1922, '28 and '32—two British ships and one American one have crossed the point Winslow indicated, but without encountering a reef.

Position in Doubt.

The charts of the sea list the reef with an appended "P. D.," position in doubt. No such reported reef is recognized as existing until it is officially checked.

King would not speculate on the whereabouts of the missing aviators, because he did not want to venture opinions that might confuse the search. He said he would speak only of the characteristics of the islands, the reefs and the conditions of climate and sea as he found them in 1924 when he sat the bridge of the U. S. S. Whippowill as it rounded the lee of Howland Island.

He was commanding a scientific exploration into the down-under areas about Howland. He saw the island of a morning, a flat, unappealing piece of land—2½ miles long north and south and a half-mile wide, projecting 18 to 20 feet above the sea. He remembers the sea pounded one of its sides like a booming gun.

He swung the Whippowill to a protected side, and even there the currents were sweeping. Natives, he had been told, could manage small boats best in those tropical waters. His bluejackets had no difficulty getting ashore.

Found No Inhabitants.

There was nothing of appeal in sight. Years before, commercial companies had men on the island, but these were gone, and they had left little to remind of their once dismal occupations. King and his company of scientists found the weather good; they found the brackish water, the pigweed and grass.

They observed the weather, especially. King recalls it as "hot as ——," but there was always a relieving breeze that billowed the stumpy scrub grass.

If storms came they were mild and, importantly, brought rain. "Every condition of climate would be in their favor," he thought.

He pointed out that Howland is 1,620 miles southwest of Honolulu, and appears to have been first reported by Capt. George E. Netcher, of New Bedford, and as being discovered on September 9, 1842. He thinks the general characteristics of Howland essentially the same as those of other South Seas pin dots.

And he remembers its loneliness and spoke—a trifle sypathetically—of the handful of men stationed there in the American occupation venture.

School Heads In Virginia Open Session

Growing Trend to Spur Pupils' Iniative Pointed Out.

Charlottesville, Va., July 8 (AP).—High school principals and school superintendents from throughout the State began a three-day conference at the University of Virginia today by hearing four speakers discuss new developments in the field of secondary education.

Dr. D. E. Grizzell, professor of secondary education in the University of Pennsylvania and chairman of the executive committee for the "co-operative study of secondary school standards," told of the growing movement to encourage initiative and experimentation in high schools as opposed to standardization.

"The co-operative study of secondary school standards is sponsored and financed by six regional associations of colleges and secondary schools and is financed by a national educational foundation," Dr. Grizzell explained. "It will be completed in July, 1938, when significant modifications in present standards and accrediting practices will be recommended.

"These tentative new standards, approximately 1,700 specific items, have been formulated from data extracted from more than 200 research studies, committee reports and other authoritative sources of information on secondary education."

Dr. Grizzell said that "a significant contribution to the study is concerned with shifts in emphasis from standardization to stimulation of growth on the part of the individual school.

Dr. A. M. Jarman, assistant professor of education in the University of Virginia, discussed how the small high schools may be improved and said that as soon as school officials have been convinced that an enriched program is desirable for small high schools something will be done about it.

Dr. William R. Smithey, professor of secondary education in the university, presided over the conference which also heard Miss Ellen Fletcher, librarian of the Matthew Whaley School in Williamsburg, and H. I. Willett, principal of the Cradock High School.

'Phantom Police' Smashed D. C. Gambling Empire, Official Says

How seven men, eligible for the police force, became secret operatives and furnished the information which led to the wrecking of Washington's $1,000,000 gambling empire and 124 indictments including five policemen, was revealed yesterday by a high official.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, was in charge of the drive, and the special gaming squad, where the undercover men served, was headed by Lieut. Floyd Truscott, aided by Detective Sergt. Earl P. Hartman.

These secret officers were investigated for more than two months, until their reputations were found to be beyond reproach. They then were sworn in as police privates, and forbidden to reveal their jobs even to their families.

From that time on thev became men in complete disguise, when on duty. They posed as street corner loafers, taxi drivers and disgruntled laborers.

For the next four months they haunted pool rooms, became acquainted with gambling overlords, placed bets in horse racing establishments and even made plans for elaborate wire-tapping setups.

Met Secretly.

All the while their real identities officially were known only to Maj. Brown, Truscott, Hartman and the District Commissioners.

They were forbidden to enter Police Headquarters Building, and any business had to be transacted between them and Truscott and Hartman. This always was done in remote meeting places in various parts of the city.

They were not allowed to use any of the police telephones. If a call became necessary it was sent through a private line to either of the squad leaders' homes.

When payday came, their checks did not come through the usual Treasury channels with those of their brother officers. A special method of payment was worked out, and this has not yet been revealed.

To Enter Police School.

Their first big job done, these men will be relieved of their duties with Truscott's squad. Tomorrow they will enter the police school, where they will use their own names once more. Their courses completed, they will be given their uniforms and put on regular patrol duty.

Maj. Brown said yesterday, when questioned about the set-up, that it was the only way such a vast clean-up could have been accomplished.

Inquiry UnderWay In Hospital Death

The coroner's office last night was investigating the death in St. Elizabeth's Hospital yesterday of Mrs. Sally G. Davis, 85, a mental patient.

Mrs. Davis, who was admitted to the hospital last year, succumbed to the effects of a fractured hip suffered Wednesday when she was knocked down by another patient.

Setzler Will Head National Museum

Frank M. Setzler, acting head curator of anthropology in the United States National Museum for the past year, yesterday received full-time appointment to the office, succeding the late Dr. Walter Hough.

Mr. Setzler came here from the University of Chicago seven years ago to join the National Museum staff. While in Chicago he was State archeologist of Indiana, and as a student at Ohio University he helped in the excavation of the original Hopewell Mound, the high point in the culture of the ancient mound builders.

As a member of the Museum staff, Mr. Setzler discovered in several Texas mountain caves the remains of a previously unknown race of cave dwellers. He also extended the area of mound investigation to Marksville, La.

America Hoards Quarter of Billion In Old Currency

You probably never see any of that big, old-style currency any more, but some people still are holding quite a chunk of it, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

When the old bills were called in July 10, 1929, about $5,100,000,000 was outstanding. Treasury figures showed yesterday $222,649,000 never has been turned in.

The old bills are being received for redemption, however, at the rate of about $1,800,000 monthly.

The outstanding ones include $100,000 in gold certificates, which the law requires to be turned in for redemption. Holders of other classes of the big currency can keep it if they wish.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

A Scion of British Nobility Settles in Hollywood As Training School for Future English Production

The Earle of Warwick Signs a New Acting Contract to Learn Inside Workings of the Art of Picture-Making; Rialto to Change Policy to First-Runs; Hoover Receives a Plaque; Notes of the Theater World.

MR. HUBBARD KEAVY, one of the most observant of this department's West Coast finger-in-the-wind bureau, advises by wire that the Earl of Warwick—Hollywood's social dodger—on Wednesday fanned the ink dry on a new motion picture contract and stated that he was in the film capital to learn the business.

BELL.

As a matter of fact, the earl—he also is the Earl of Brooke and Baron Brooke—has been articled to the screen for some time past, but so far his screen work has been as conspicuously nonexistent as his appearances in Hollywood night life, which he studiously avoids.

Brooke was under contract to one studio for six months and admits that he did not do a thing to earn his salary: Not a blessed thing. "But," he says, "the studio asked me to stick around for two months longer, after the contract ended, to take some tests." The tests were never taken and Brooke has a suit pending against his former employers asking that they pay him his salary of $750 per week for those two months.

He says frankly that his new Paramount salary will not be quite so large, but he practically has been guaranteed that he will be permitted to do something in front of the cameras before so very long.

The reason the tall, dark and slender earl is not in his native England, minding the business of several large estates and mines he inherited, is because he discovered that people can be hired to do your work for you. He is married to a distant cousin and they have a 4-year-old son, David. Neither likes night life. They have a few friends in Hollywood, including Charlie Chaplin, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, sr., Dolores Del Rio and her husband, Cedric Gibbons, art director, whom they see frequently.

"I hope to learn enough in three or four years," the earl admits, "to be able to start my own producing company in England. I will hire competent men to head the several departments. I hope to acquire, as an actor, what might be termed a 'checking knowledge' of all the essentials of picture-making."

One hates to be discouraging, but there are a good many who have been in Hollywood a great deal longer than three or four years who haven't got that far, even yet.

There seems to be a good deal of confusion in a good many minds as to the identity of Mrs. George Hall, wife of the orchestra leader who "discovered" Dolly Dawn, opening with Red Skelton on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater today. On the strength of a personal letter from an interested friend, which said, in part, "It seems she (Dolly Dawn) is the wife of George Hall, who has had the orchestra in the Taft Hotel, New York, for many years," we stated yesterday that in private life Miss Dawn might turn out to be the wife of the maestro. Now comes a probably more authentic bulletin which announces that "George Hall and Mrs. Hall will both arrive in town today to 'catch' Miss Dawn's opening show. While Mr. Hall will return to New York shortly to carry on his direction of one of New York's most popular orchestras, Mrs. Hall will remain here all week to chaperone Dolly, whom she considers 'too young to be left on her own, alone.'" Apologies and genuflections to the Halls and Miss Dawn, and to the writer of that letter, a gentle kick in the teeth!

A change in policy is imminent at the Rialto Theater. Abandoning revivals of past film successes, the Ninth street house plans to present a number of outstanding motion pictures never before seen in Washington. The new policy will be inaugurated on Sunday, July 18, with Alexander Korda's production of "Elephant Boy," based on "Toomai and the Elephants," Rudyard Kipling's tale of the little Indian boy who longed to become a great hunter.

"Elephant Boy" has elicited warm praise from drama editors, film trade journals and the English Kipling Society and recently was accorded a full page in Life. What the picture may lack, in the view of American audiences, is a "star," in the sense of a well-known Hollywood "name." Director Robert Flaherty, maker of "Nanook of the North" and "Man of Aran" and a stickler for stark realism, deliberately avoided such a guarantee of box-office appeal by insisting that the natives in the film be true natives. However, it is said by those who have viewed the film, that the work of the tiny, brown-skinned Sabu, finally selected to play the 12-year-old lad who sets out to top the reputation of his grandfather as a famous elephant hunter, bids fair to make him a star in his next picture, if not in this.

"Elephant Boy" will be followed on the Rialto screen by Elisabeth Bergner's new picture, "Dreaming Lips," with Raymond Massey and Romney Brent in support. Like "Catherine the Great," "Escape Me Never" and "As You Like It," this subject was directed by Miss Bergner's husband, Paul Czinner.

Tonight at 7:30 o'clock, 30 Marines from the Marine Barracks will attend the Earle Theater to see Dick Powell in "The Singing Marine." In full summer dress uniform, the Marines will attend the premiere in tribute to Powell, who plays the part of an enlisted man in the Marine Corps in the picture. Dick also sings a special song, entitled "Song of the Marine," which already has been accepted by the Marine Band and played several times as a worthy marching number for the corps.

In his office yesterday at noon, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was presented with a bronze plaque commemorating the part the Department of Justice and the G-men played in making Universal's "You Can't Get Away With It," voted by readers of the Jay Emanuel Publications as the best two-reel novelty released this season.

At the same time a similar plaque was presented to Charles E. Ford, of New York, director of Universal News, the unit that produced "You Can't Get Away With It." Presentations were made by W. A. Whitney, Washington correspondent of the National Exhibitor, the Jay Emanuel regional trade journal that circulates in this territory.

Believe it or not, the ferocious looking Groucho Marx, with the slightly guttural and rasping voice, made his first important stage appearance as a girl. He was only 13 years old at the time and was impersonating a girl with an act known as the LeRoy Trio. From his subsequent blonde chases, I still think it should have been Harpo!

Maureen O'Sullivan, one of the most reliable of the cinema's younger actresses, is to be seen at both ends of the same block on F street this week. She is cast as the nurse, with Franchot Tone and Virginia Bruce, in "Between Two Women," at Loew's Capitol, and as leading ingenue with the Marx Brothers in "A Day at the Races," at the Palace. She does full justice to both roles.

New York, July 8.

ENTERPRISE: Billy Seeman and his wife, Phyllis Haver, visited the Surfside Club last week-end. Bert Frohman introduced the celebrities present, and Mr. Seeman was among those called upon to take a bow . . . The millionaire husband of the former screen star amazed everybody when, instead of merely bowing, he walked to the microphone. "Everybody thinks I'm just a playboy," he announced. Well—get this." To indicate the possession of talents other than those usually attributed to a playboy, Mr. Seeman then proceeded to play a popular tune upon the violin, sang "California, Here I Come," tap danced—and concluded with hot-lick interpolations to "Melancholy Baby!"

• • • •

CELEBRATION: President Roosevelt made a July 4 address at Mount Marion, N. Y., as the highlight of the church bazaar held there that day . . . The Republicans who dominate that sector were extremely pleased at playing host to such a distinguished visitor. But as a measure of compromise they sold toy souvenirs of the occasion—small G. O. P. elephants.

TURMOIL: Ten days ago Enzo Fiermonte approached a group of us at "21" and laughed when someone made a playful swing at him. "I fight back," he announced, "—for $1,000. Only amateurs fight for nothing" . . . Fiermonte then revealed that when he was in Paris this year a young husband challenged him in a movie theater—for an alleged insult to his wife. "I told him 'Give me 7,000 francs and I accept your challenge.'" Fiermonte chuckled. "Fighting is my profession" . . . Enzo must be reflecting upon this story now—in the Long Island City workhouse to which he was sent for assaulting a news photographer.

SPEED: A one-time film producer visited Al Trahan last night and tried to interest him in investing in an independent movie outfit with which he will be associated. "Just give me one month's time," he insisted, "and I'll turn out a feature-length production—but on one condition" . . . "Really?" asked the amazed Trahan. "What's the condition?" . . . "The condition is," the producer explained, "it must be a month with 31 days!"

REGRET: Sherman Billingsley sat with George White in the desolate Stork Club Sunday night. "It looks like everybody's out of town celebrating the Fourth," Billingsley sighed, "except us two" . . . White departed, returned in five minutes and then, in the swanky confines of the Stork Club—shot off a giant firecracker!

TRIUMPH: Fifteen years ago Charlie Foy, Al Herman, Bobby Watson and Harry Seymour played several weeks together in vaudeville. To cement their friendship and to establish a fund in case of need, they tore a $100 bill into four pieces, each retaining one piece . . . Recently Seymour was signed as dialogue director for "Adventurous Blonde," a Warner production. Herman, Watson and Foy also were signed to work in that movie . . . And at the reunion, next week, the four pieces will be assembled and the $100 spent for a studio blowout.

CONSOLATION: Hal LeRoy golfed at the Saddle River Country Club. At the second hole LeRoy drove three new balls out of bounds into an adjoining farm-patch where the laborers immediately pounced upon them . . . "I don't mind," LeRoy consoled himself. "Those were especially made for me—with my name printed on them. I charge that off to publicity."

ERROR: Lily Pons, whose pronunciation still is imperfect, entertained some guests and regaled them with tales of her concert tours. "Twice I played in Misery," Miss Pons stated, "and loved it. Misery really is lovely" . . . The guests were somewhat puzzled—and so Andre Kostelanetz, Miss Pons' fiance, hastened to explain . . . "Not 'Misery,' dear," he corrected. "Again I must tell you—it's 'Missouri.'"

Russia, Germany, To Sign Naval Pact

London, July 8 (AP).—Authorized spokemen said today that announcement of bilateral agreements bringing Soviet Russia and Germany within the scope of the 1936 London naval treaty might be expected next week.

The two nations, in signing such agreements with the British, will become subject to the three-power pact between Britain, the United States and France, which limits the size of warships but not their numbers and provides for exchanges of naval building data.

Train Wreck Attempted, 2 Youths Are Arrested

Hagerstown, July 8.—Arrested after their descriptions were given to railroad detectives by a vagabond, Chauncey and Leonard Boles, brothers, of Chambersburg, are being held charged with placing crossties on the tracks of the Western Maryland Railroad yesterday near Chambersburg.

A slow-moving freight train struck the first of the ties without damage to the train. Another tie was placed on the tracks a short time later. The youths told police they placed the ties on the tracks to "see what would happen."

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, July 8.—Whenever I think about the real ages of some of our handsome "young" leading men and women, I marvel—and no wonder, because many seem to have discovered some miraculous fountain of youth. For fear of wrecking careers and making myself a fly in Hollywood's ointment, I won't mention names, but there are plenty of screen heroes old enough to be the fathers of the young matrons who sigh while watching their love scenes—and there are "girls" on the screen who have children old enough to marry.

How do they do it? You can hear a dozen different explanations. People will tell you that their skins are kept youthful by the constant use of grease-paint. Others argue that they don't age because they have leisure to exercise. And there are cynics who like to hint at the use of toupes, corsets and other mechanical contrivances. Probably there is truth in each contention, but I think they all overlook the real reason. Screen stars stay young because their work is never monotonous, because they live in a world of make-believe. Every day on the sets they meet new problems; every picture role is a new life to live. Acting is hard work; a precarious means of livelihood—but it's always interesting.

I like the attitude of Gladys George toward Hollywood and the great success that has come to her after lean years on the stage. While chatting with her, I commented on the fact that she continues to live in a modest bungalow. She told he: "I don't give a darn about trying to impress people who might be impressed by a swankier layout. The only people I would like to impress don't give a darn what kind of a house I live in!"

The Hollywood credo of showmanship at any cost gets us all. Yesterday, strolling along the boulevard, I noticed a coal black darky, dressed "fit to kill"—silk top-hat, swallow-tailed coat, pearl gray spats, white silk vest and monocle—haranguing the passing crowd from his perch on a shoe-shine stand. "Come one, come all and let Little Sunshine, th' Duke o' Hollywood, give yuh th' best shine they is!" he chanted. I fell for the ballyhoo and while "His Grace" polished, he explained proudly:

"In dis town, I'se found out, yuh gotta make 'em notice yuh. Ah's goin' t'make even barefoot folks remembeh me when they does git shoes!"

Andy Devine has been cutting kitchen capers in his trailer. I sampled one of his dishes at luncheon today, and it was so good I'm passing on the recipe!

Fry an onion in a little butter. Dump a can of red kidney beans, a can of tomato soup and a can of corned beef into a frying pan. Put in the onion, bring it to a boil, and let it simmer for about five minutes. Eat as is, or with rice. They try and get an afternoon's work done without falling asleep.

You have been seeing Eric Blore in a lot of pictures during the past two years. Yesterday I asked him how many, and he said: "Twenty-eight in two years and a half. I've only made two so far this year, but when I think of those other 26, I get very, very tired—let's sit down."

By Jack Benny.

Hollywood, July 8 (U.P.).—I must be getting dumb, because I'll be darned if I can figure out whether Hollywood is insulting me or whether I've just been making a mistake.

I got by in vaudeville for a good many years and then I went on the radio and have been getting by there for a few years. Then I went in the movies, and now I'm beginning to wonder.

The trouble started when I went up to the office of Lew Gensler, who is producing "Artists and Models," my next picture.

"But, Lew," I said, rather sorrowful like, "is this necessary?"

"Oh, most assuredly, Jack," he replied. 'We simply must have it."

And I got the same answer wherever I went. So I went back to my dressing room, locked the door and pulled down the shades. I even turned off the lights so that I couldn't see myself. And I put the contraption on. It took me about a half hour.

Then I opened the door and peeked out cautiously. There was not a soul in sight on the street that runs past the dressing room. So I squared my shoulders and stepped forth into the blazing sunlight.

And there I stood for the whole world to see—attired in a costume that I still don't know whether it belongs to Little Lord Fauntleroy, Robin Hood, or Romeo.

Devine Discovers Disgrace.

There I stood for the world to see the depths to which I had descended. After all these years in which I got laughs dressed in clothes that any man can wear, I find out that for the movies I have to put on a combination of long winter underwear, an old maid's night cap and a turkey feather.

But the worst was yet to come. Of course, just at that moment, Andy Devine, who is working in a picture called "Double or Nothing," had to step out of his dressing room, which is next to mine.

He looked at me for a minute as if he thought he was seeing things.

"I'll swear I wasn't drunk last night," he said to himself in that cracked voice.

Then he pinched himself.

"Ouch," he howled, "yes, I'm awake. So it must be Jack Benny."

And he ran toward me and took me in his arms.

"Oh, Jack, you darling, you sweet thing," he screamed. "To think that I haven't really appreciated you all these years."

The Last Straw.

That wouldn't have been so bad. I probably could have stood that.

BUT HE TRIED TO KISS ME.

I twisted out of his arms and dived head first through the dressing room door and locked it against the mob outside.

In the darkened room, I sat down in a chair and reflected on my shame. I telephoned Gensler, I telephoned everybody I knew, from the director to Adolph Zukor. They assured me that the costume was necessary.

So they sent me a strong-arm squad from the police department to guard me as I went to the set.

But will someone please tell me this: Have I been insulted or have I been making a mistake all my life in thinking that I was a comedian?

Claude Griffith, 50, Is Dead of Burns

Claude Griffith, 50-year-old World War veteran, died in Emergency Hospital yesterday of burns suffered in a rooming house fire in the 1200 block I street northwest last Sunday.

Griffith was rescued by firemen after his plight was discovered by another roomer, Paul M. Van Horn, 40. Van Horn said he was attracted to the room by Griffith's shouts of "get me out of this shell hole."

At the hospital, Griffith was unable to tell anything about the fire. His mind apparently had turned back 20 years to a night at St. Mihiel when he lay wounded in a shell hole.

Reprieve Prevents Read Death Today

Read, originally sentenced to die July 9 for the slaying of W. Earle Dollman, received the reprieve to allow his lawyers to present a transcript of the trial to the supreme court for a writ of error and supersedeas.

the Treasury to make advances to the District until the tax measure becomes a law.

"That seems to be our only hope," Hazen said "It would do no good to raise the realty tax rate to $2.10 as we wouldn't get any of the money before September, and we need cash right now."

The Treasury loan proposal is incorporated in the omnibus tax bill before the Senate, but the District heads hope that it may be passed by both houses in advance of the tax measure."

Revenue Loss Feared.

Unless the majority leader changes his mind or the District Committee amends the tax bill, the District may be without new taxes for several months.

Should Senate leaders refuse to take up the tax bill until the court reform measure is disposed of, the District will not only be confronted with a desperate financial situation, it was said at the District Building, but the city will lose all the additional revenue it has counted on collecting since July 1.

Meanwhile, Senator King, chairman of the District Committee, filed a minority report attacking the Tydings rider to the tax measure in a 20-page document.

The Tydings amendment, which relates to State sanctions of price resale maintenance, is "wholly irrelevant" to the District bill and "an indefensible rider," King's report said.

Rider Sponsors Assailed.

Senator Tydings and sponsors of the bill, he said, had taken advantage of "the desperate condition of the District of Columbia, which will be without funds in a few days, and have employed the proposed tax bill as a vehicle to secure passage of a measures which seeks to repeal the Sherman antitrust law and permit price fixing in many States and thus affects business and economic conditions throughout the United States."

Notices were given on the Senate floor that two amendments will be offered when the tax bill finally is called up. Senator McCarran proposed to strike out a paragraph which makes the sales tax applicable to food sold in restaurants or hotels, while Senator Tydings presented a clarifying amendment to his own rider to prevent price fixing by a combination of manufacturers or wholesalers.

His rider would waive the Sherman anti-trust law so as to sanction State laws which permit manufacturers to fix retail prices on their own goods.

Commissioner Hazen stated that he will confer with Auditor Daniel J. Donovan today to ascertain just how much money the District may need before realty and personal property taxes are collected in September.

The joint resolution consequently may specify a certain sum which the District would burrow. Now all the money that the District has on hand is the remainder of the $5,000,000 Federal contribution carried in the 1938 appropriations act. As the District ended the fiscal year about $1,500,000 short, however, this money cannot possibly keep the city operating until September.

Rate Fixing Delayed.

Failure of Congress to pass a revenue measure after voting a $46,000,000 appropriations act places the District heads in a peculiar position.

Because of the pending tax bill, however, they have delayed fixing the realty rate. The House decreed that it should be raised to $1.70 on $100 valuation, while the Senate District Committee has recommended to the Senate that the tax on improvements remain at $1.50 and the levy on land be raised to $2.50.

"It wouldn't be fair to put all the burden of the $7,000,000 deficit on real estate," Hazen said.

"The first thing you know we won't be able to meet our pay roll unless Congress gives us authority to obtain a loan from the Treasury. Congress got us into the hole, and it has got to get us out.

"We will need an advance of several millions of dollars. Congress could earmark the new tax revenue, and we couldn't help but pay it back. We are violating the law, and something ought to be done right away. All we want is enough money to meet current expenditures."

Voorhis Urges Public Vote on War Measures

Legislator Outlines 4-Point Peace Program in Talk at Institute.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 8.—Representative H. Terry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, advocated tonight a national referendum on war as one of four ways by which he said America can remain neutral.

He advanced his four-point plan in a debate with Dr. Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the League of Nations Association, before the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs.

Voorhis, the first of the two speakers on the subject "Can America Remain Neutral?" declared America "can remain neutral and keep the peace if America does four things and does them now." None involves a desertion of the cause of democracy, Voorhis said, adding that "I am convinced they offer us the only sure way in which democracy can be preserved."

These he listed as: Writing into the Constitution the Ludlow amendment which gives to the American people the right to decide by national referendum whether they choose to go to war; check the growth of a boom in munitions and war materials before "it becomes a Frankenstein monster;" discovering and putting into "practical operation the positive side of the "good neighbor policy'," and making the Nation "propaganda proof."

America can remain neutral, he asserted, if she will take the necessary steps "to prevent war profits from destroying peace."

"The United States can continue the work already started at Buenos Aires of building an American peace group, covering the entire Western Hemisphere," Representative Voorhis declared.

"Bonds of trust and understanding, the basis for increasing trade and inter-dependence in this hemisphere, should be forged as tightly as possible. The stronger our purely American ties become the weaker the drive to involve us in Old World brawls will be."

Voorhis saw in the "unequal distribution" of sources of food, raw materials and markets among the nations "one of the strongest factors making for war today."

"America and all she has stood for through the years," he said, "calls us to keep her at peace, to make her the world's guardian of the arts of peace, the preserver of democratic life, the keeper in trust of the gains so far made by man until such time as the rest of the world comes to its senses."

Airport Report Today to Urge Maryland Site

ditions would allow them to use the long East-West runway.

This announcement was contained in a letter sent to Fred D. Fagg, jr., director of air commerce for the Government, by David L. Behncke, president of the Air Lines Pilots Association. Behncke stated the pilots of American and Eastern airline companies, using Wsahington Airport, requested the field be designated a "two-way field."

This would mean it could be used for the big planes only under certain wind conditions. When wind conditions necessitate using the shorter runway, pilots either would land at Bolling Field or continue on to Richmond or Baltimore.

Local aviation enthusiasts yesterday welcomed the pilots' ultimatum. One executive of a local flying club, who asked his name be withheld, said he and others indorsed the letter completely, objecting only to its "mildness."

Yesterday Behncke said the pilots, long annoyed by the condition of the present terminal, had begun action three weeks ago, leading to yesterday's ultimatum. He said he was informing the executives of the two air lines of the decision of the pilots.

Fagg was not at his office yesterday, and no one in the bureau could speak for him, although receipt of the letter was acknowledged. It was indicated, however, the bureau will take up the pilots' complaint officially and may designate Washington Airport as a "two-way field."

If this is done, and the pilots' ultimatum is equal to an official verdict of the Department of Commerce, Bolling Field is the only local field equipped to handle the large planes under all wind conditions. Although the War Department allowed an airline to use the field temporarily several years ago, it is doubtful if it again will agree to letting commercial aviation interfere with military operations.

Although the announcement by the pilots came directly before the Airport Commission held its final meeting, Behncke emphasized it was purely coincident.

The new airport will be designed to be the finest flying field in the country, sources close to the commission indicated. It will be a national airport rather than a purely local terminal, according to the same source.

Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps and a member of the airport commission, last night said he was unwilling to predict the War Department's attitude in the event it should be requested to make Bolling Field available for commercial planes, but pointed out its policy has been to co-operate with commercial lines as far as possible.

The law permits commercial lines to use Army landing fields in event of an emergency, and it was thought possible the War Department would be willing to consider the Washington situation a "continuing emergency."

A request for the use of Bolling Field should be made by the Department of Commerce as the official Government agency acting for the air lines, Gen. Westover said.

Bolling Field, he pointed out, bears an unusually heavy amount of military flying, and arrangements to handle commercial planes would have to be worked out very carefully.

D.C. Convictions Reach 79.8%, All-Time High

1,933 Cases Handled in Year by 14 Aides; 318 Nolle Prosses.

Convictions or guilty pleas in 79.8 per cent of all cases in District Court during the fiscal year ended June 30 was the record breaking mark set by the district attorney's office, according to the annual report issued yesterday.

A total of 1,933 cases were handled by 13 assistants in the 12-month period, an increase of almost 350 over the preceding year, John J. Conliff, chief clerk, who compiled the report, said.

The high percentage of convictions was especially gratifying, Conliff said, in view of the 318 nolle prosses during the year. Most of the cases marked closed, he explained, were fugitive warrants two to five years old, which the statute of limitations does not affect if they are ever reopened. Many, he said, concerned missing husbands who later became reconciled with their wives.

Other figures presented by the report included: Number of verdicts of guilty, 232; number of acquittals, 68; number of pleas of guilty, 1,311, and number of cases dismissed on motion, 2.

More than 200 more pleas of guilty were recorded than in 1936, Conliff said, ascribing the condition to a general strengthening of cases. More and more defendants, he said, seemed to realize their almost certain conviction and elected to try the mercy of the sentencing judge. Verdicts of guilty also increased from 200 to 232 over the preceding year and acquittals dropped from about 100 to 68. Previously, convictions have averaged about 70 per cent.

On June 30, 1937, there were 358 cases pending, of which only 94 were actually in position for trial. Of these, only five defendants were in jail awaiting trial, two of whom already having entered pleas of guilty. The other defendants were at liberty on bail. A year ago 303 cases were pending.

Sometimes as many as 15 cases a day have been presented to the district court during the last few months, the office reported, a substantial increase over earlier days.

General Manager Given Tribute Dinner at Mayflower.

Officials of the Hecht Co., last night paid tribute to the 25 years Charles B. Dulcan, sr., has given to the firm at a dinner in his honor in the Mayflower Hotel. Dulcan is vice president and general manager of the company.

The dinner was attended by Moses S. Hecht, chairman of the board of directors of the company, the associate directors and executives of the Washington store.

Dulcan came to the company 23 years ago as a salesman in the men's furnishings department. He became buyer, then merchandise manager, general merchandise manager and, finally, in November was raised to the general managership.

Other tributes were paid him by Jeff Miller, vice president of Hecht Brothers, Baltimore; George M. Quirk, vice president and store manager of the Hecht Co.; Harry Davidow, vice president and general merchandise manager of the Hecht Co.; Willard Halls, divisional merchandise manager of the Hecht Co., and C. L. Marlow, who as store superintendent, gave Dulcan his first job.

Two gifts of sterling silver, one from executives of the store and the other from Hecht, were presented Dulcan. Mrs. Dulcan was given a bouquet.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 8.

ALICE HUGHES.

ONE of the things that mar New York for out of town visitors, I learn from a visitor from Dallas who prefers to remain nameless, is our lack of moon-consciousness. She is willing to concede that we have approximately the same moon hanging around our heavens that they have down there in Dallas. But she complains of never seeing it here. The high buildings shut it out.

One never knows in New York whether it is full moon, half or quarter time.

She is probably right. And apparently other out-of-towners, transplanted (probably against their desire) to New York, have registered their moon-consciousness sufficiently so that the latest trend in restaurants and night clubs is to doff their roofs whenever possible.

The Jumbo Marden's Riviera across the George Washington Bridge has a roof like a rolltop desk. You just press something, and off comes the roof. The Claremont Inn, nestling in the greenery at Central Park, is luring them in with promises of stars and a moon from the terrace. The St. Regis roof, the Astor roof, and, of course, the starlit Waldorf Astoria, have long used the moon as bait.

This brings us face to face with a momentous conclusion. You can't quite outwit nature. We New Yorkers have grown so content with synthetic substances for most natural phenomena, that we jog along for months without even missing one of heaven's most important astral bodies. Then along comes a romantic, sweet little Texas girl and puts us right back into our proper place.

A number of New York hostesses are relishing gifts of a copper or zinc mail box painted with the design of their pet pastime. Marian Miller, authority on children's education with the Child's Study Association, learned from her new letter and package box for her house at Pound Ridge, Conn., that her fondest pastime is gardening, and her favorite flower, delphinium. Her own delphinium bed, painted in true colors, now greets the postman every day on the Miller mail box.

• • • •

I went to the twenty-fifth birthday party of the Automat chain of restaurants a few days ago. This nickel-in-the-slot system of collecting food from behind small glass compartments is attractive to over 300,000 persons daily, who frequent New York's 50 Automats. This party provided no birthday candles. Nothing but food. We invited ones were given handfuls of nickels and asked to make our selections and serve ourselves, just as do the rest of the world. We were urged to choose the two specialties, plus coffee, in which this chain excels: spaghetti and baked beans. No particular fancier of either dish, I must report they made good eating. After it was all over, a quartet of busboys came out and sang this song:

"Oh how I love the Automat!
The place where all the food is at!
I like to watch the milk run out
And join the coffee at the spout."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—A local dream man is Vincent Price, whose first appearance on a New York stage was an important one; that of playing Prince Consort to Helen Hayes' Queen in "Victoria Regina." This tall, slender actor's return in the fall in a Viennese comedy called "Jean" has girls' hearts going pit-a-pat. . . .

Health 'Annuities' to Fortify Children for Life Should Be Ambition of Parents, Says Educator

Miss Greba Logan Tells of New Project in Portland Schools.

By Malvina Lindsay.

A START in life—once it meant 60 acres of land and a team of mules. Or the material equivalent. Now it is coming to mean pre-eminently a healthy body and a healthy mind.

Parents and teachers are rapidly awakening to the need of supplying their children with a "stake" of health with which to face the world, believes Miss Greba Logan, who occupies the unique position of supervisor of health education in the public schools of Portland, Oreg. Miss Logan, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Fred C. Lloyd, Ontario Apartments, is on her way to New York to do special study during the summer.

Miss Logan's job was created for her two years ago and has been financed by the Oregon State Tuberculosis Association as a contribution to child health. Previously as a teacher in the Portland Demonstration School of Health and Physical Education, Miss Logan had carried out many of her ideas about imbuing children with the ambition to be healthy citizens.

Kindling the desire in the child for health—that is the only way to build a strong and healthy nation, insists Miss Logan. She is proud that America has chosen this way, the democratic way, rather than the autocratic method of dictators. She believes that the American plan, which is now getting under full steam, will bear far greater results than the regimented drills, exercise and diet to which Fascist youth is subjected.

Avoid Preachments.

The parents' part in this program is a big one as Miss Logan sees it. Here are some of her suggestions to the mother who would send her child into the world fortified with a health "annuity" that will pay dividends in terms of material success and personal happiness:

"First, maintain a positive attitude toward the matter of health. There are too many 'don'ts' in the home and not enough "do's" when it comes to training children in health habits. There is too much health preaching by mothers, especially in matters of diet. When I hear a mother say, 'Junior just won't eat carrots' I want to tear my hair. Parents should minimize the idiosyncrasies of the child rather than emphasize them.

"Adults talk too much about food before children, especially at the table. They should assume that the children will eat the food that is set before them and they should set an example by doing so themselves. A pleasant atmosphere at the table, attractive settings and interesting conversation will go a long way toward making a child eat and enjoy his food."

Miss Logan's second suggestion to parents is to see that their children get enough rest. Mothers, she believes, fall down on this duty more than on any other. School surveys, she points out, have shown that nine-tenths of the disciplinary problems of all age groups were alleviated when the children were given sufficient rest.

Week-End Jaunting

"If mothers would only turn off the radio and get their children to bed at night!" lamented Miss Logan. "If they would only see to it that their children every day had the amount of rest demanded in their age groups! If they would only not take them off on week-end jaunts and visits in which their routine of eating and sleeping was upset!

"Teachers find too many children coming back to work Monday morning tired and upset, their capacity for work slowed up because of the wrong kind of entertainment over the week-end.

"I do not mean that children should stay home all the time. Change of scene and new activities are helpful to them. But parents should see that the child's routine of living is not upset and that he gets sufficient rest. For that matter, one of the best ways parents can help their children achieve health is by getting sufficient rest themselves. Many a family quarrel would be averted if parents got sufficient rest."

Miss Logan's third suggestion to parents is to help their children develop healthy minds, so that they will grow up co-operative and unafraid. There again the positive attitude comes into play.

Need of Self-Confidence.

"Plan constructive projects for Halloween," she advises, "so that destructive habits will not be formed. Keep the child so busy with creative things he won't have time to develop a negative attitude toward life. Help him toward confidence in himself. Today we do not tell a child that he can do everything somebody else can, but we try to lead him to do for himself the best he can."

Miss Logan does not look upon the teaching of health in the school as another fad to crowd out the "three R's." No matter what else you learn, what can you do with it unless you first have health?" she asks. "Moreover, the teaching of health now is related to other subjects. In Portland, for example, we tie it up in the lower grades with such projects as operating play cafeterias and stores constructed by the children. The child in the make-believe cafeteria not only learns to order the right food but to make the right change. He learns arithmetic along with his vitamins. He also gets manual training in the construction of these projects.

"In the later grades, health is tied up with geography, physiology, biology and the social sciences. The children are taught to make their pursuit of health one phase of their general program of living. I hope to see the day when as much emphasis is placed on health as on any other subject in the curriculum."

Parents should teach children how to be healthy through the positive approach—by "do's" rather than "don'ts," says Miss Greba Logan, supervisor of health education in the Portland, Oreg., schools.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Amoebic Colitis.

WHEN A FEW years ago, during the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, a number of visitors were struck down with amoebic infection, the epidemic so caused called attention to the fact that we had an unexpected health problem in the United States in the form of amoebic dysentery. Most people, even physicians, had come to regard amoebic dysentery as a tropical disease. But Chicago could hardly be called a tropical district.

As a matter of fact, amoebic dysentery had been present sporadically in the United States, even on its northern borders, for a good many years. It is liable to spring up whenever the vegetables from a truck farm have become infected, or when cooks and other food-handlers are infected with the disease. There have been epidemics on the California coast, as a matter of fact, there still are.

The amoeba responsible for the condition is a small unicellular animal parasite which fastens itself on the mucous membrane of the colon and produces ulcerations.

The symptoms—pain, diarrhea and emaciation—are so severe that it should be possible to treat the condition always in the acute stage.

A number of drugs are available which, if used properly, will kill off the amoeba and allow the colon to return to normal. The one used for the longest period of time is ipecac. Lately some new drugs, vioform and carbasone, have been introduced which are very effective.

All too frequently cases are allowed to go on to a chronic stage. The condition is not always severe, and many manifest itself only in slight rectal spasm. Some of these cases have been treated for rectal ulceration which later are shown to be amoebic colitic. It is these chronic cases which spread the disease, and today the public health service and practicing physicians generally are more alert than they were to detecting such carriers.

It is to be hoped, and it is expected, that now that the danger is realized that the disease can be entirely eliminated.

Questions From Readers.

E. M.: "My husband needs foods with iron to make his blood stronger. What foods contain iron?"

Get More Out of Life

Does life seem to pass you by while you stay chained to a humdrum round of duties?

And do you wait patiently hoping that the way will be cleared; that some day, you'll really begin to live?

Don't put off living to the future. Overcome the obstacles between you and the happy, successful life you hoped for. Begin living now.

What stands between you and happiness? Perhaps you've failed to make the most of your opportunities. It's never too late to begin self-improvement.

Is it lack of self-confidence that keeps you from enjoying life to the fullest? "Self-confidence is the first requisite of great undertakings," said Samuel Johnson. Of all the qualities necessary for success, self-confidence is the easiest to build up. Developing even one virtue or talent or charm will give you faith and confidence in yourself.

Or have you mastered the art of living with people? You can learn what to say—and what not to say—to win admiring friends. Remember to compliment—"that's just your color of blue!" instead of criticizing—"that dress is too youthful a style for you."

Or don't you know how to live with yourself? To every one comes the need, perhaps only for a short time, to keep himself company. Is your mind rich and full enough to entertain you?

Don't stay in the backwater. Our 40-page booklet, GETTING MORE OUT OF LIFE, tells you how to get into the main stream. A definite plan for developing character, intelligence and personal charm to make your life more enjoyable.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Getting More Out of Life, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read the letter from "Self-Conscious" in your column of July 2, and wish to give her practical suggestions for overcoming the nail-biting habit of which she spoke. I had the habit myself as a child and so had my daughter, and both of us overcame it by providing ourselves with a really efficient nail clipper, always at hand in dressing room or purse, with which to keep nails and cuticle smooth. It is the rough-edged nail and cuticle which tempts the nail biter.

• • • •

My second suggestion is for grown-ups only. It is to use a fairly substantial coating of colorless nail polish. It doesn't attract attention and completes the job of making nails disagreeable to bite. This coating should be kept always fresh, however, because one tends to pick at chipping polish. For some reason, these methods entail no anguished efforts at self-control, and I have high hopes that they would be very effective in the case of your correspondent.

• • • •

May I take this occasion to tell you how much interest my husband and I take in your column? We have been on the verge of writing you impassioned praise a dozen times, but this seems to be our first opportunity for writing without taking sides in an argument! Sincerely yours,

G. H.

DEAR G. H.: Thank you for the helpful suggestions and the "impassioned praise." I would say you had hit on a most ingenious method for conquering the nail-biting habit. I hope "Self-Conscious" employs your advice. M. H.

Unloved Wife's Query.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married to the world's worst brute for 25 years. I loved him dearly when I married him, but his brutal treatment has caused me to hate him. I was forced to ask the court for protection after he tried to kill me, in order that he might have the woman of his choice. At present divorce proceedings are under way. But here's the problem:

• • • •

I have been seeing, quite frequently, a gentleman whom I greatly admire. He has called at my home several times. But my daughters are pointedly rude to him. They can't seem to understand that I get lonely. Both of them are grown and will soon be married. Should I cater to them and stay at home, lonely? Or should I go out and enjoy life before I get too old? MOTHER.

• • • •

What to Believe.

DEAR MOTHER: At your age, and with your experience at living, you should be able to make common sense decisions concerning what is permissible conduct. If the man is a decently dependable sort of individual, who can be relied on to play the role of true friend throughout this domestic crisis; who is careful not to make you the subject of damaging gossip; who is genuinely concerned with your happiness and not intent on exploiting a lonely, heart-hungry, neglected wife, I see no reason why you shouldn't avail yourself of his companionship, just as you might that of a sincerely devoted woman friend of contemporary age and mature sympathy and understanding.

• • • •

I think you should be careful, however, not to make yourself ridiculous or talked-about by indulging in late hours, giddy excursions, dubious associates or rendezvous kept in doubtful surroundings. In circumstances of this kind, a man whose friendship is worth having, whose interest is well-intentioned, will stand by, so to speak, and at the same time take care to shield the woman he thus befriends from malicious criticism. If your friend is that sort of man, ignore your daughters' attitude; if he isn't, beware of him. M. H.

Lighter Hosiery To Be Vogue for Autumn Costumes

Colors for fall hose will be a little lighter in tone than last year according to the Fall Hosiery Card just issued by the Textile Color Card Association. The card contains nine shades including five new tones—Burnt Sugar, Blushglo, Rio, Incatan and Indes and four repeated shades, Carib, Cafe Clair, Avenue and Smoketone.

The hosiery colors are designed to blend with the new fall shades in apparel. Burnt Sugar and Blushglo combine effectively with the high fashion mahogany in textiles and leather while the coppery Incatan provides a lively new accent for the green and rust shades in costumes and accessories and keys well with the swagger Scottish Clan colors popular in sports shoes.

While neutral hosiery shades like Andes and Avenue continue in strong favor as a complement to the black costume and shoe, there is a growing trend toward colors of more animated character, as Burnt Sugar or Incatan, to enliven the black ensemble.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I'M HAVING the time of my life," announced Helen B., whose husband just lost a lot of money in a fire that destroyed his place of business. "Because Frank and I are back where we started out, and in spite of all the ups and downs we feel like honeymooners again.

"Of course, I'm doing my own work because we can't afford a maid. It's the first time I've really worked in the kitchen of this house, which we bought after we'd gotten on our feet. It wasn't a new house then, but awfully livable. So I had always thought, anyway.

"Till I really rolled up my sleeves and went to work here, there were more things wrong with this kitchen! I wish I'd known before how much time and energy it wasted . . . after all, it's as good economy to save the maid steps as to save myself.

"To begin with, the sink was much too low, so that an average person had to lean way over to use it. That didn't matter so much for dish washing because I could sit down. But every time I wanted water for cooking or rinsing or any one of a hundred things, there I'd have to lean.

"Then I found that the cabinet where we kept silver, dishes and cutlery and mixing bowls was across the room from everything else, while the pots and pans and groceries were on the other side of the room near the stove. The refrigerator was adjacent to the sink.

"I have had the sink raised, but I can't move it or the refrigerator or the stove to bring the three in reaching distance. I could get cupboards around the sink-refrigerator unit, though. I had all the space below the sink made into cupboards, then turned the corner with another cabinet that ran around the adjacent wall. Here I made room for all cutlery, silver, dishes, mixing bowls and groceries and most of the pots and pans. I left the frying pans and the like alongside of the stove, but kept all those that would have to be mixed in or fixed ahead in the cupboard by the sink where the groceries were.

"Then I bought a kitchen table on wheels, that I could pull from my working unit to the stove. This works fine, and with a couple of high stools to sit on my kitchen is as handy as you please. Oh, yes, I forgot to say that I tuck trays here and there around the kitchen so I will have them to load up any old time and save extra trips.

"Frank and I did all the work—he's a pretty good carpenter, and I did the painting. All these changes called for a new color scheme, so we decided on Swedish blue for the kitchen walls—you know that lovely but vivid blue of the Swedish flag—and yellow ceilings, yellow wash curtains and some yellow pottery on a shelf just for show."

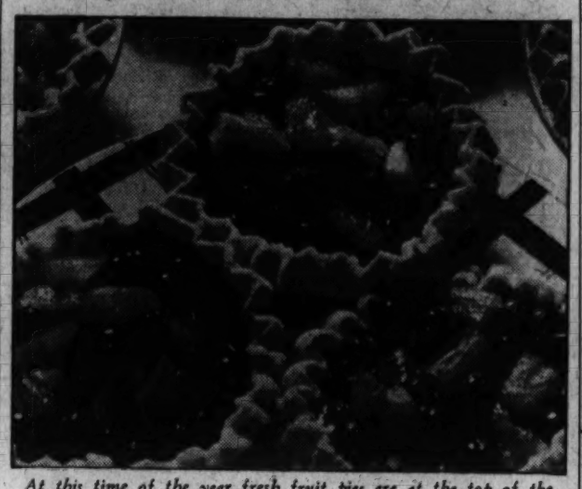
Pies, an American Tradition, Can Be Made to Fit Seasons



At this time of the year fresh fruit pies are at the top of the dessert list. A single fruit may be used as the pie filling, or fruits may be combined, as cherries and pineapple have been for these pastries.

By Rebekah Blake.

PIES are one of America's traditions, just as is the Thanksgiving turkey, and there are certain pies that fit in with definite seasons of the year.

During the summer it is a good idea to use the fresh fruits as much as possible. These fruits are delicious served in pies, especially if the pastry is flaky and delicately browned or crumbly, as preferred.

If you wish, fresh fruits can be combined with gelatin to make unusually toothsome pies. Make a plain gelatin, flavoring it as desired. Just as it begins to thicken, add fruit and pour into a baked crust. Put in a cool place and allow gelatin to set. Serve with whipped cream or marshmallow.

Many of the summer fruits combine well with others to make good pies. You will like to try raspberry juice with raisins some time. By combining 1 cup of raspberry juice with 1 cup of raisins, cooking them together and thickening slightly, you have the filling for a delicious seedless raspberry pie. No sugar, or very little, is needed for this filling.

Other Combinations.

Other good combinations are pineapple and rhubarb, mulberries and cherries, strawberries and rhubarb, rhubarb and raisins, gooseberries and mulberries and many more.

Fruit pies taste especially good when the crust is made with half butter. For a two crust pie, use 1-3 cup butter and 1-3 cup of any other shortening, to 2 cups flour and ice water from ¼ to 1-3 cup. Remember that pie crust is flakier if put to chill thoroughly before rolling it out.

Delicate chiffon pies make good warm-weather desserts. It might be orange, pineapple, lemon or peach—with equally good effect on the cook, as well as the rest of the family. For these chiffon pies are easily made with practically no cooking. If you do them with a cooky or cracker crust, they don't have to go into the oven at all.

If you are using peaches, you may make a double crusted pie, a latticed top one, meringue or one with a French custard base. Each is so good that it is hard to decide which to prepare.

The French custard that you use is made like a soft custard, only use ½ teaspoon of cornstarch as well as two egg yolks to one cup of milk. Just before pouring it into the pastry shell, add a tablespoon of sherry. Pour the thickened peach sauce over the custard, spread with meringue and bake until the meringue is brown and cooked.

Brush Bottom Crust.

For all fruit pies, it is important to take the following precautions against soaked bottom crust and a filling that runs out in the oven. First brush the bottom crust with unbeaten egg white before putting in the filling. (If you like, save the yolk of the egg and mix it with 1 tablespoon water for brushing the top of the pie before baking. This will give it a grand shine.) Then, if you like to thicken the filling, use flour, cracker crumbs, eggs or quick-cooking tapioca. Always moisten the edge of under crust with cold water, and press top crust down into it firmly with fork. If you use a solid top crust instead of a lattie, be sure to cut several slits in the center to let out steam. Finally, be sure to have your oven hot (450 degrees Fahrenheit) for the first 15 minutes of baking; after that reduce heat to 350 degrees Fahrenheit for remaining time. Most fresh fruit pies require about 35 minutes in all. It is a good idea to insert a paper funnel in one of the openings in the upper crust. The funnel acts as a chimney, allowing the steam to escape and preventing the pie from running over.

Blueberry Pie.

¾ cup granulated sugar
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter
3 tablespoons water
1 quart fresh blueberries
Enough dough for two crusts
Combine quick-cooking tapioca, sugars, salt, butter, water and berries; let stand 15 minutes, or while pastry is being made. Line a 9-inch pie plate with ½ of pastry rolled ⅛-inch thick, allowing pastry to extend ½ inch beyond edge of plate. Moisten the edge of pastry with cold water and fold inward, even with rim of plate. Fill with berry mixture. Moisten edge again. Roll other half of pastry ⅛-inch thick. Fold half the pastry back on other half. With a sharp knife make several slits to permit escape of steam. Place upper crust on filled lower one, opening out folded half after it is placed on pie, and drawing snugly across top to prevent sagging at edges. Press edges together. Trim off surplus pastry, being careful not to cut folded edge of looser crust. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 15 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350 degrees Fahrenheit) and bake 20 minutes longer or until filling is cooked.

Fresh Pineapple Pie.

Prepare 4 cups fresh pineapple (cut in small, wedge-shaped pieces) and mix with 2-3 cup granulated sugar, 1-3 cup fine, sifted cracker crumbs and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Line an 8 or 9 inch plate with pastry, brush with unbeaten egg white, moisten edge with cold water and turn in the filling. Then dot with butter (1 tablespoon) and put on top crust. Press edge of this down firmly with fork. Make incision in center. Brown with egg yolk (and 1 tablespoon water). Bake 15 minutes at 450 degrees Fahrenheit and about 20 minutes at 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

Hot Foods Urged On Summer Menu

Hot weather calls for hot foods. That is the lesson the tropics teach the summer-time cook. In India, in Mexico, wherever the temperature reaches the sizzling point most the year round, the daily food is seasoned to suit the weather. And here in the United States it is time for us to bring spices into their full glory and let them stir our appetites on days when bland foods would make us nibblers.

Skillful summer menus are built around contrasts. The plate-warming curry or con carne is served with a cold salad. Water ices are balanced with hot coffee. A heartening condiment is served with the cold cuts, a squeeze of lemon gives contrast to the sweetness of iced tea.

For Mildew Stains.

To remove light mildew stains, soak the stained article for two days in sour milk or buttermilk. Then rinse it in cold water and wash it in warm water and soap suds.

Fruit Plate Colorful For Summer Dessert

A fruit plate is a colorful summer dessert. It may be made by adding small bunches of grapes to cherries (on stems), pineapple slices and sliced peaches. Attractively arranged on a shallow glass dish these fruits have a cooling appearance. They may be garnished with grape leaves and should be served cold.

Dishwashing Hints.

A small closet placed above the sink for holding dishwashing necessities is quite a labor-saving device. A rack may be made to hold the dish pan if the sink is too low.

Iced Tea Sweets.

Soak cube sugar in orange or lemon juice to be served with iced tea.

Store oils, such as olive or vegetable, in the refrigerator. They are likely to become rancid when opened unless they are kept chilled.

And regarding that rich, nutty flavor which distinguishes Sanico Peanut Butter: It is the result of the careful selection of Virginia and Spanish peanuts that go into it. First Lady Starting 'Off Record' Vacation

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

Mrs. Roosevelt's "off the record" vacation began at midnight last night when she boarded a train for New York. She will have lunch in Hyde Park today, and expects to spend most of her time there the remainder of the summer.

She said so yesterday at her last press conference this season—a conference that touched on a variety of subjects ranging from the search for Amelia Earhart to criticisms of the Greenbelt project. Wearing a blue flowered chiffon frock with a high neck and flowing sleeves, the First Lady answered questions for more than an hour, and then regaled her audience with an amusing account of a recent interview—not for publication.

From now until August 20, when Mrs. Roosevelt accompanies her son, James Roosevelt, to the Young Democrats convention in Indianapolis, she will be off the record, but she did divulge that she has two appointments between now and then. The Women's City and County Club of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., will meet on the lawn of Val Kill Cottage on July 15, and on August 10 she will attend the National Girl Scout meeting at the camp in Briarcliff, N. Y. Another summer appointment she mentioned is her lecture at Chautauqua, N. Y., on August 21.

Reviews Boy Scouts With President

Yesterday morning Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied the President and Commissioner Allen when they reviewed the Boy Scouts. And after luncheon she made another informal call at Jamboree headquarters to visit the Dutchess County boys and to see their replica of the facade of Hyde Park.

Last evening there was a prevue of the Spanish film upon which Ernest Hemingway and Joris Ivens have been working. Both Hemingway and Ivens were dinner guests at the White House and were present at the pre-vue. Mrs. Roosevelt said she knew nothing about the film, except that it was to be released to the public sometime soon.

Asked whether she had heard from her son and new daughter-in-law the First Lady laughingly replied she had received "a wire telling me to do some things." In answer to further questioning, she averred she had not yet been requested to look after the furnishing of the house in Charlottesville, and did not expect to be. In this connection she also pointed out that "it's better for young people to do as many things as possible for themselves."

Holds Out Hope For Amelia Earhart

When the discussion turned to Amelia Earhart, Mrs. Roosevelt said she felt that an individual with the endurance and courage of Miss Earhart had a greater chance of holding out under a long strain, and that she still had hopes of a rescue. Referring to the flier as "a grand person," Mrs. Roosevelt spoke of her simplicity, absolute sincerity and lack of vanity.

"One thing we must remember about people who do adventurous things—their actions result from an impelling feeling that is a vital part of them," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "Adventure is in their blood." This observation followed her complimentary mention of Walter Lippman's defense of Miss Earhart's reasons for attempting the recent flight.

Congressional criticism of the cost of the housing project at Greenbelt, Md., was the next topic of talk, and Mrs. Roosevelt expressed the opinion there is "nothing to be ashamed of in the fact that the Government spends money to try to give more people a decent level of living, and to improve the standard of living they already have."

Says Experiments Are Always Expensive

Declaring that "nothing experimental is ever inexpensive," she further averred that "this type of housing is new, and since we have no pattern to follow, it is naturally costly." She said; however objections to costs had at least evoked the interest of many people who otherwise might never have been concerned with improving sub-standard living conditions.

"I never object to objections or criticisms," she went on. "That's the way people begin thinking about new subjects. Later they may agree that what they objected to most at first was, after all, a good thing to do."

For the next month, Mrs. Roosevelt said she expected to spend much time reading, resting and swimming. She also plans to continue her early morning horseback rides, and to do her writing in the hotter part of the day when she would be indoors anyway.

She doesn't expect to go to Campobello this summer—a good part of my vacation will be spent on the Hudson," she repeated—and she isn't planning to go out in search of guests. "But I find that whether I plan for guests or not, I always have them," she added.

Mexican Envoy Host to Scouts From Homeland

Twenty Visitors Clad in Colorful Costumes Attend Party.

The colorful music room of the Mexican Embassy echoed gay Mexican songs yesterday, when the Ambassador and Senora de Castillo-Najera, assisted by their daughter, Erma, and their niece, Lupe Davilla, received a troupe of 20 Boy Scouts from Mexico.

Senora de Castillo-Najera was dressed in black and white sheer, while the girls wore the bright national costume with green skirts embroidered in spangles, white blouses and heavy gold beads and earrings.

The Boy Scouts were not in khaki, but wore native Mexican costume of hand-woven material, with long trousers caught at the ankle with lacings, some embroidered in stripes down the sides, cream shirts with red stitching and sometimes ruffling, leather sandals, and gayly colored ponchos and sombreros of all kinds. Most of the boys were from Mexico City traveling in a special bus with Scoutmaster Jorge Nunez. They will drive to New York and sail from there to London, and will later motor through Holland, France, and Italy. Their vacation comes in autumn, when Mexico grows warm and so now they are missing school for this trip.

Singing was the order of the program. Throughout the afternoon lilting notes poured from the windows of the second floor of the embassy as the group moved from room to room. The Ambassador and Senora de Castillo-Najera joined heartily in the songs, the former supplying many verses that the others could not remember. His three boys and their pet dog also joined in the merriment.

At the long buffet table set in the cool room opening on the sun porch and aviary, the boys clustered around to enjoy the dainty sandwiches, petit-fours, bonbons, cold meats and chocolate and cocoanut cake. Senorita Erma de Castillo-Najera served fruit and watermelon punch. It was not long before the Scouts were singing again joining in part songs with the senoritas to the accompaniment of the guitar. In one corner of the stately hall Senorita Lupe Davila was seen practicing some intricate steps from the national Mexican dance.

Among those who attended the reception were Senorita Laura de Los Rios, daughter of the Spanish Ambassador; Senorita Dora Boyd, daughter of the Minister from Panama; Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union; Mr. Alfonso Ribes and Senora de Ribes, and Mr. Benito Flores, of the Mexican Claims Commission; Brig. Gen. Jose Luis Amezena; the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, Mr. Luis Quintanilla and his sister, Miss Lulu Quintanilla; the Misses Martha and Betty Stattsmith, the First Secretary of the Embassy, Dr. Rafael Fuentes and Senora de Fuentes; Mr. Manuel Gonzalez and Senorita Margarita Gonzalez, Mr. Raimondo Cuervo and Senora de Cuervo, Senorita Maruca Tercero, Senorita Ana Ranierez Duque and Senorita Lochito Arango.

Miss Billard Wed in Tokyo, To Live There

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Louis Billard announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Frederica Chamberlayne Billard and Donald Wakeham Lamm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Lamm on Tuesday, June 15, in Tokyo, Japan.

Three services were read in connection with the wedding, according to the custom in Japan. On Monday, June 14, a ceremony was performed under the direction of the American Consul. Following that, a representative of the Japanese government officiated at a ceremony. The formal church service was read the following afternoon, June 15, at the home of the American Commercial Attache and Mrs. Frank S. Williams, with Father Doyle of the Sacred Heart Church of Tokyo officiating.

The bride wore a tailored suit of white sharkskin, a fluffy white organdy blouse and a wide-brimmed white hat. Around her neck was a rosary fashioned of silver and moonstone that originally belonged to her great-great grandmother.

Her only attendant was Miss Miye Hirooka, a Japanese classmate when Mrs. Lamm was a student at Wellesley College. Both Miss Hirooka and Mrs. Lamm were graduated from Wellesley in 1936. At the wedding Miss Hirooka was attired in a blue ensemble.

Following the wedding there was a reception at the American Embassy attended by about 25 members of the American colony and a number of Japanese officials.

After a brief bridal trip away from Tokyo, Mr. and Mrs. Lamm are now making their home at the American Embassy, where he has a position.

The bridegroom has been in Tokyo for several months, having gone over early in the year. Miss Billard left Washington for Japan on May 23, so the marriage could take place in Tokyo.

Fort Myer Riders to Appear in Show Tonight to Finance Visit of Horsemen

Much interest is being shown in the horse show scheduled for tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the Jamboree arena at the Monument Grounds to raise funds for completing arrangements to bring the Irish team to Washington next October to compete in the Inter-American Horse Show.

Since night horse shows are unusual events, this one promises to be a colorful and complete event within itself. Troop F from Fort Myer will present its famous rodeo and Troop E is on the program fr its unique musical drill. A number of officers from Fort Myer will show their mounts and several expert horsewomen in the Capital and from nearby will ride, including Mrs. L. W. Robert, Mrs. Leslie D. Carter and Miss Margaret Carter.

The show is given under the auspices of the Inter-American Horse Show. In case of rain, the show will be held tomorrow night.

Mrs. Bradley Honored on Reaching 80

Daughter Gives Reception for Women's City Club's First Treasurer.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Laura Bradley, first treasurer of the Women's City Club, yesterday celebrated her eightieth birthday anniversary. She was guest of honor at a reception given by her daughter, Mrs. Basil Manly, and received messages of congratulation, gifts and flowers all day. The baskets and vases of delphinium roses and gladioli in every corner of the room, made it look like the setting for a debut party.

Mrs. Bradley wore a black chiffon gown with a ripple of white running through it, and a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Manly was in a white chiffon, figured in rose and blue and her daughter, Mrs. Walter Briggs, jr., of Detroit, wore a tailored frock of navy blue. Mrs. Briggs was there only for the beginning of the party as she and her husband, who had come Wednesday especially for the All-Star baseball game, left in the late afternoon for their home.

Prominent Club Women Assist

Among the guests were Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, Miss Mary La Follette, Mrs. Paul Greever, Mrs. Frederick N. Towers, Mrs. Norman Frost, Miss Josephine Roche, Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Louis Montfort, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. Charles Consaul, Mrs. Mary Moyer McElroy, Mrs. Frederick Yates, Mrs. Herbert C. Drane, Mrs. C. S. Gunnalls, Mrs. Margaret Titus, Mrs. John Rudd, Mrs. Frank McNinch, Mrs. Albert Manly and Mrs. Rose McCarthy.

Has Held Many City Club Offices

Mrs. Bradley has been a resident of Washington since 1914 and was one of the charter members of the Women's City Club. After serving as treasurer, she was elected second vice president and then first vice president. For six years she also served as chairman of the luncheon committee of the club.

In addition to her membership in the City Club, Mrs. Bradley was for some years a member of the Voteless District of Columbia Branch of the League of Women Voters. She no longer belongs to this, however, as she cannot be active in many things and prefers not to have membership in an organization to which she is unable to contribute her time and interest. She is a life member of the City Club and attends its meetings whenever she can, but retains membership in no other organization.

MISS GLADYS OPPENHEIM, librarian at Bloemfontein, South Africa, who has come to this country under a Carnegie award for the study of the American library system.

Youngest South Africa Librarian Here to Study American System

Miss Gladys Oppenheim Thinks U. S. Methods Surpass Those of Europe; Praises 'Friendliness' in This Country.

MISS GLADYS OPPENHEIM, M. A., A. L. A., youngest librarian in South Africa, is here from Bloemfontein, legislative capital of the Orange Free State, studying the American library system.

"Our system is more like that of the United States than of England," said Miss Oppenheim. "We consider the American system the ideal and I have found it surpassed all I had expected. The Library of Congress—mecca of all librarians—is much more beautiful than I had believed, even from the descriptions I had read of it."

Miss Oppenheim, petite, vivacious and responsive, with a smile twinkling from her black eyes, is enjoying her first visit in America. She has been in England and Holland studying the library systems there, and, while in London, was notified she had been awarded a Carnegie grant for study in this country. She sailed aboard the Queen Mary for New York in time to attend the annual library conference there and, at the end of two weeks, came to Baltimore and on to Washington.

She is staying at the Women's University Club for four days and then will continue her tour through the country. Her itinerary takes her to Hampton Institute, to Atlanta, Knoxville, Birmingham, Tuskegee Institute, Baton Rouge, Los Angeles, Bakersfield, San Francisco, Sacramento, Yellowstone Park (there to see other things than libraries), Denver, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Toronto and back to New York to sail for home the middle of September.

Her particular mission is to investigate our library facilities for colored people. In South Africa there are no libraries for them but boxes of books are sent to various places where depots have been established. There the books are distributed and in four to six months a new consignment is sent to replace the first. The plan is similar to that of Merchant Marine Library Association in this country which provides books for seamen.

On her visit to the library at Howard University here, and to the Harlem Branch Library, in New York, Miss Oppenheim found large collection of books on Africa, the works of colored authors and books dealing with the problems of the colored race, as well as the usual reference books and fiction.

The friendliness in public libraries in this country was what has most impressed Miss Oppenheim. The atmosphere of those in Great Britain is somewhat austere, she says and, in Holland, the central libraries are not open to the public. In the small branches there, however, excellent work is done, especially in the children's departments. She is taking copious notes for articles and reports on her trip when she returns home.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

MRS. EARL VINTON SISSON, national chairman of national defense for the D. A. R., will arrive in Washington Sunday from her home in Winnetka, Ill., and, accompanied by Mrs. Paul Scharf, of her committee, will go from here to Charlottesville, Va., for the Institute of Public Affairs. She has been invited to be the guest of the Institute and to address one of its sessions on Wednesday, which is designated as D. A. R. Day. "Roads to Peace" will be her subject.

Mrs. Sisson and Mrs. Scharf will stay at the Farmington Country Club and will be guests both Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons at luncheons being given in Mrs. Sisson's honor. Mrs. George H. Whitten, Virginia State chairman of national defense, is chairman of the day at the Institute. Mrs. C. Bernard Bailey is regent of Albemarle Chapter, which is hostess.

Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler will address the evening mass meeting Wednesday on "Avoiding War in the Pacific by Attending to Our Own Business."

Thursday, Mrs. Sisson and Mrs. Scharf come back to Washington and Mrs. Sisson expects to be here a few days to look after business "at the office" before returning to her home. She recently has been in California, where she gave a series of talks on the same subject on which she is to speak at Charlottesville.

Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist is like the old woman who lived in a shoe when it comes to the organizations with which she is identified—they are hard to count. She is chairman of education for the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs; secretary of the Art and Archaeology League; treasurer of the Columbia Heights Arts Club; secretary of the Sorority Council of Washington; member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma Alumnae Club and its delegate to the Pan-Hellenic Congress; member of the Mortar Board Alumnae. There may be a few other things, but just offhand I don't think of them.

THE WOMENS CITY CLUB, which is bending every effort toward the success of its Cotton Carnival a week from last night, had a little get-together dinner last evening at the clubhouse, with Mrs. Raymond H. Keller as hostess.

Not all of the members will be here for the fun next Thursday, however, for vacations have lured them away from the Capital. Miss Florence C. Bell, recording secretary, for instance, is down in New Orleans spending two months. Mrs. May Belle Raymond, the club treasurer, is in Maine for July. Judge Mary O'Toole, the second vice president, is motoring in New York and through New England, winding up near Boston for the balance of the summer.

Mrs. Albert G. Dodge, although she is chairman of summer activities, is having a vacation this month up at Middletown Springs, Vt.; Mrs. I. B. Dodson is on a motor trip to the Pacific Coast, and Mrs. Caroline B. Stephens, president of Temple School, is at her summer home in Blue Ridge Summit.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, the club president, is really spending the summer here, having returned only a few weeks ago from a trip to Mexico. However, she runs up to New York now and then to visit her son, John, and his family—the past week-end was one of those occasions.

Mrs. Margaret M. Hill, secretary at the clubhouse office, will be on the job all summer, but the early part of September expects to go to Maine and into Canada for a short visit. Mrs. Hill, incidentally, is an Australian and went to her home in Sidney for a real vacation two years ago.

Bethesda Club Plans Two Fetes

First Open House Is Set for Tuesday; Next in August.

The Woman's Club of Bethesda is planning two "open-house" meetings, the first on Tuesday of next week and the second early in August, as summer gatherings for the members remaining at home for the season.

Mrs. Reed Bradley is chairman for the affair Tuesday, which is to include a stunt party and an original fashion show. Members will bring their luncheons and the program will follow, with bridge later in the afternoon for those who desire to stay and play either in the clubhouse or outside on the terrace.

Among those who will take part in the stunt program will be Mrs. L. L. Nicholson, president; Mrs. Thomas Cassey, Mrs. Harry Pirie, Mrs. Edward Garlock, Mrs. Peter Deck, Mrs. Richard Titlow, Mrs. Ford E. Young, Mrs. N. H. Rabner, Mrs. S. M. Green and Mrs. E. V. Kohman who with a group of others, will provide the music for the occasion.

Reginald Whitcombe's 142 Score Tops British Open Field by 2 Strokes

Youthful English Star Shoots Superb Golf; Dudley Fades; Denny Shute, Henry Cotton and Alf Padgham Tie for Second With 174s; 11 Americans Qualify for 36-Hole Finals.

By Scotty Reston.

Carnoustie, Scotland, July 8 (AP).—Reginald Albert Whitcombe, largest and youngest of England's three distinguished golfing brothers, swung over Carnoustie's shaggy heath in 70 strokes today to take a two-stroke lead at the halfway mark in the British Open golf championship with a score of 142.

Two shots back of Ed Dudley at the end of yesterday's first round, Whitcombe covered the stretched-out 7,200 yards of Carnoustie in three under par, leaving Dudley two shots behind.

Dazed by the first day of sunshine in a week, the Americans missed what little chance they had to take the lead. But generally they strengthened their positions within striking distance of the leader as the tournament moved into its final 36 holes, to be played tomorrow.

Eleven players from the United States qualified with 36 others for the final flight. Five others—Gene Sarasen, Tony Manero, Kirkwood, Amateur John W. Bailey, of Battle Creek, Mich., and American-born British Amateur Champion Robert Sweeney—failed.

One Whitcombe would have been enough for any championship today, but the leaders had to contend with two of them. The most noted member of the tribe, elder brother Charles, who captained the British Ryder Cup forces, managed to get around in 71 and was tied with Dudley at 144, 2 strokes off the pace.

Two shots farther back were three of the most dangerous players in the world—Denny Shute, the United States pro champion, who won with four straight 73s in 1933 and tonight already had two of them; Henry Cotton, who won in 1934 and is showing that he is coming on his game, and Alf Padgham, who came back to prove that he is a worthy defending champion after all.

Bill Branch, the former English internationalist, who was tied for second at 72 yesterday, skidded to a 75 and was a shot behind the three champions.

Trailing by another stroke, at 148, came Horton Smith and Walter Hagen, both of whom rallied splendidly for a 71 and a 72, respectively, after disappointing first-round scores; Bobby Locke, South African youngster seeking low amateur honors for the second year in a row; A. J. Lacey and David (Dai) Rees, British Ryder cuppers, and Fred Robertson.

Navigator's Death Blow To Sopwith

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., July 8.—T. O. M. Sopwith's second British challenge for the America's Cup was dealt a serious blow today when death took Capt. Donald MacPhee, navigator of his big blue sloop, Endeavour II.

The veteran mariner found his last harbor while Ranger, Harold S. Vanderbilt's third defender of the famous trophy and the boat he would met July 31, was setting a new record out on Block Island Sound and scored her tenth straight victory over Chandler Hovey's Rainbow and Gerard B. Lambert's Yankee.

The racing craft returned to find flags on both American and British yachts moored in Brenton cove at half mast and to learn of the captain's death.

A native of Oban, Scotland, Capt. MacPhee had spent 40 of his 56 years at sea, chiefly in square rigged merchantmen. He was operated upon June 29 for gastric ulcers. At first he rallied, but later there were relapses which transfusions of blood furnished by Dr. R. J. Milligan, medical officer of the Sopwith invasion, failed to check.

Capt. MacPhee's widow will decide if his body shall rest in a Newport cemetery or be taken home for burial.

Today's race was largely a repetition of yesterday's contest, although Ranger's margin of victory was not so wide. The Vanderbilt boat finished a 27.7 mile irregular triangle three minutes and 36 seconds ahead of Rainbow and six minutes and 12 seconds before Yankee.

The summary: Start 11:40 a. m. (Eastern standard time) 27.7 mile triangle; wind southwest by west 8.8 to 16 miles per hour.

Hamel Vanishes After Release by Nashville

Police yesterday were asked to look out for Charles C. Hamel, 32, who has been missing since June 21 when he was released from the Nashville (Tenn.) Baseball Club.

Mrs. Nora Hamel, 1012 M street southeast, the man's wife, requested police aid. She said she feared her husband might be despondent due to his release.

Pro Group Sets Date Of Tourney

Also Cards Schedule of Double Exhibition Matches.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers championship, long the stepchild of the association, was boosted to one of the most attractive tournaments in this section as the dates and location of this year's event were approved yesterday by George Diffenbaugh, head of the local pro body.

The event is scheduled at the Chamberlin Club, Old Point Comfort, Va., Saturday and Sunday July 31 and August 1, over the 72-hole medal play route. The prize money of $500, will be backed by the hotel at the Old Dominion resort. Al Houghton is professional at the resort course.

It is the first time the tourney has been played as a medal event and as a result the field is expected to include Wiffy Cox, Bobby Cruikshank, Chandler Harper, Jack Issacs and the local pro contingent as well as the Baltimore delegation.

Charles Betschler, the chunky Hillendale pro, won the event last year by defeating Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, in the finals. As a match play event it has failed to draw the name pros in this section but with the added prize money and the week-end dates, a banner field has been promised, including Cox and Cruikshank who were opposed to the match play idea.

The local mentors also released a tentative schedule for their week's double exhibition matches yesterday at a meeting called by Wiffy Cox, Kenwood pro and backer of the plan to treat the local links fans on Sunday afternoons.

With several of the pros planning to play in the Shawnee Open next week, the matches will be resumed on July 18 when Al Treder will play host to the octet of exhibitionists, including Cox, Bob Barnett, Roland MacKenzie, Mel Shorey, Cliff Spencer, George Diffenbaugh and Leo Walper.

A round-robin series is planned with all local clubs as host and the host pros replacing one of the original eight at his club. First and second prizes will be awarded to the low scoring pros and the individual clubs will boost the prize money.

A committee of three, Walter McCallum, Maury Fitzgerald and Merrell Whittlesey, have been named to arrange the pairings for the matches at the various clubs.

Aside from the sweepstakes prizes and the awards to the winning teams, a prize for the best medal average over the season's play will be given. Roland MacKenzie was named treasurer.

On July 25 the pros will play at Columbia with Freddie McCleod as a participant. The P. G. A. will force an open date August 1, while Indian Spring occupies the August 8 date. The next Sunday is open, while Congressional is host on the 22d. Belle Haven, with Tommy Ryan playing, will entertain on August 29 with East Potomac awarded the September 5 date, providing there is no conflict with the Hershey Open.

Woodmont, with Gene Larkin playing on September 12; Army and Navy, with the Burton brothers, Danny and Alan, as participants on September 19, and Dave Thomson playing with the troupe on September 26 round out the tentative schedule. Argyle is under consideration should an open date appear.

Detroit, July 8 (AP).—Mickey Cochrane, struck on the head six weeks ago by a pitched ball in New York, has left the Henry Ford Hospital here to continue his convalescence at home.

Dizzy spells which bothered him for several weeks have disappeared and Mickey no longer remains in bed.

The Detroit Tiger manager, who was placed on the inactive list two weeks ago at his request, has not indicated whether he would be able to visit Navin Field before the present season ends.

Miss Prudence Wins.

Detroit, July 8.—Dixiana's Miss Prudence, the favorite, won the $1,000 graded handicap for 3-year-olds and up, feature race at the State Fairgrounds here today.

Jacobs Trounces Trenton

Bucky Jacobs, former University of Richmond mound ace, who pitched his first full game for the Nats yesterday, holding Trenton to only four hits as Washington won, 3 to 1.

Gentile Is Archibald's Newest Foe

New Yorker Brings His Formidable List of Victories.

Harry Gentile, the little Italian-American, who twice inspired Joey Archibald to take a run-out powder, finally has caught up with the Providence puncher who is the current local boxing favorite.

Gentile has been signed to do ten rounds of battling with Archibald in the semifinal to the bout which will bring together Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele and Hobo Williams at Griffith Stadium July 20.

The signing of the Archibald-Gentile tussle is in keeping with the promise of the Variety Club, promoting the big card which is sponsored by The Washington Post, to give Washington the best boxing show it has ever known.

Gentile boasts a formidable record among the bantamweights, featherweights and even in the lightweight division. He defeated Al Reid, who twice defeated Frankie Terranova and Joey Wach and held to a draw none other than Pete Scalzo, Pete Reilly's phenomenal featherweight prospect.

Gentile also soundly trounced Nicky Jerome, who was Archibald's last victim in Washington, and scored over Jimmy Martin and Joey Izzo, among others. Although he lost a decision to Indian Quintana, Martin, one of Gentile's victims, beat Quintana, which practically evens matters on that score.

Brownell Cards 69 at Manor Club

Bobby Brownell, the District champion and Maryland junior titleholder, played the first round of his career in sub 70 figures yesterday, carding a 36-33 at Manor.

After playing the first nine in one over par, Bobby birdied 10, 14 and 15 on the back nine before losing a stroke on the par 3 seventeenth hole. He was playing with Eddie Stevens, Manor's assistant pro, who paid to watch Bobby play despite a 70 from his own sticks.

Local Ladies' Team Is Tied By Baltimore

The visiting Suburban Club's women's golf team tied Woodmont, 4½ to 4½, yesterday in a renewal of their matches over the Bethesda course. Each club won a match and the other was tied.

Mrs. Jack Schulman and Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith of the host tied Mrs. Henry Wyman and Miss Jeanette Myers, of Suburban, 1½ points each, while Mrs. Bertran Friedman and Mrs. Walter Cohn, Suburban, won, 2 points to 1, over Mrs. Theodore Peyser and Mrs. Gilbert Hahn.

In the third match, Mrs. L. B. Schloss and Miss Bertha Israel won, 2 points to 1, over Mrs. Alan Wurzburger and Mrs. Herbert Bergunder, of the visitors. The trophy remains in the hands of last year's winners as a result of the tie.

Mrs. C. C. Roney, with a net 82 and gross 94, leads in the Muncaster Cup play for the women golfers of the Washington Golf and Country Club. The event winds up today with another 18-hole round.

Eunice Dean Wins, Enters Net Finals

Philadelphia, July 8 (AP).—Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex., the defending champion, entered the semi-finals of the Philadelphia District Women's Lawn Tennis Tournament today with a 7—5, 6—3, victory over Cecilia Riegel, of Philadelphia.

Millicent Hirsh, of New York, in another quarter-final match, eliminated Patricia Henry, of Los Angeles, national intercollegiate champion, 6—0, 6—3.

Middle Atlantic Tennis Play Marked by Upset

Philadelphia, July 8 (AP).—Paul Haber, of New York, beat Owen Anderson, University of California at Los Angeles student and seventh ranking player, in the first upset of the Middle Atlantic Men's Tennis tournament today. He won, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2.

MRS. BETTY MECKLEY.

Playing the extreme back tees to a course measuring 6,621 yards, Mrs. Betty Meckley, the former District, Maryland and Middle Atlantic champion scored a 76 at Indian Spring yesterday, pairing nines of 36, 1 over par, and 40. She was playing with Buddy Sharkey, who posted a 1-under par 70, Alex Baumgartner and Harry Peacock.

Mrs. Meckley posted six pars on the first nine, birdied the sixth with a 12 foot putt and went over on three and eight. On the back nine she played the tenth hole poorly, carding a 6, three-putted the eleventh and missed an approach on the last hole but played the others in regulation men's figures. Six one-putt greens were included on her card.

The 76 is the lowest ever scored on the Four Corners course from the back tees by a woman golfer. Mrs. Meckley has scored 77's from the back tees and several 76's from the middle, a course nearly 500 yards shorter.

She reached nine of the greens in regulation figures corresponding to men's par including four on the front nine and five on the longer second nine. The three bad holes that prevented a par score were directly results of miscues around the greens.

Sharkey had par in for a 69 on the seventeenth tee, but slipped and finished with a 70, his lowest score over a standard course. He scored three birdies and missed par on a pair of holes.

Joe Louis Meets Farr August 26

Schmeling Sidetracked Again By Astute Promoter Jacobs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—Mike Jacobs announced today that Joe Louis would defend his heavyweight championship against Tommy Farr, British Empire titleholder, in a 15-round match in the Yankee Stadium August 26.

Originally Jacobs had set the week of September 13 for the bout. The New York State Athletic Commission approved the new date.

Farr expects to sail next week and go into immediate training.

The decision of Promoter Jacobs to send Farr against Louis leaves the stubborn Max Schmeling again on the outside of the championship picture. Max was to have met James J. Braddock in his first title defense, but Louis got the shot.

Jacobs attempted to line up Maxie for Louis' initial championship defense, but Schmeling balked and announced he would meet Farr instead.

August 26 falls on a Thursday night. In case of rain, Jacobs said, it would be held the following night.

Because of the heavyweight battle, the all-star card of champions, scheduled for the week of August 23, has been moved to the week of September 13. No definite date has been set.

Marcel Thil of Paris, European middleweight champion, will meet Fred Apostoli, former San Francisco bellhop, in the feature of that card, which also will have Barney Ross defend his welterweight title against Ceferino Garcia, Los Angeles; Lou Ambers will defend his lightweight title against Pedro Montanez, of Puerto Rico, and Sixto Escobar, bantamweight champion from Puerto Rico, will defend against either Harry Jeffra, Baltimore, or Kayo Morgan, Detroit.

English Promoter May Stop Fight.

London, July 8 (AP).—Syd Hulls, London boxing promoter, sought an injunction today to keep Tommy Farr, British heavyweight, from fighting Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, in America this summer.

Through an attorney, Hulls asked for a court order restraining the Welshman from boxing publicly "without the consent of the plaintiff before the date of the contest between Farr and Max Schmeling, of Germany."

Schmeling-Louis Bout Is Rumored

Milwaukee, Wis., July 8.—The Milwaukee Sentinel said tonight it had learned from Joe Triner, Illinois boxing commission chairman, that plans are under way for a world's heavyweight championship boxing match at Chicago late in September between Max Schmeling, former titleholder, and Champion Joe Louis.

The Sentinel quoted Triner, in Milwaukee today, as saying the fight had become a probability following the advancement to August 26, of a bout scheduled at New York between Tommy Farr, British heavyweight, and Louis.

Other Clubs' Flag Hopes Vested in Nationals; Fischer vs. Ruffing.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 8.—Washington crossed the Delaware late this afternoon, paused in Trenton for an exhibition game, and then moved into New York for a four-game series with the American League All-Stars—alias the New York Yankees—starting tomorrow.

The Nats, if only for the reason that they will be playing the league-leading Yankees, will be commanding the attention of the entire league during the series here. With the Washington club will be riding the hopes of every club which retains ideas of beating the Yankees for the pennant.

The Yankee menace threatens to make a run-away of the league pennant race, boasting a lead of five and one-half games over the second-place Detroit club. Curiously, though, the sixth-place Nats, with a record of three victories in seven games this season against the Yanks, have provided the New Yorkers with their most stubborn opposition.

Due to the three-day holiday from league competition occasioned by the All-Star game, Manager Bucky Harris has his entire pitching staff fresh and ready for the New York series, which calls for single games tomorrow and Saturday with a double-header scheduled for Sunday.

Harris has nominated the left-handed Carl Fischer for the pitching job in the series opener. Fischer held the Yanks at bay for seven innings and received credit for the Nats' victory over the Yanks at Griffith Stadium last week.

Red Ruffing, who has not yet opposed the Nats this season, is expected to take the mound for the Yanks.

Trenton, N. J., July 8.—Young Bucky Jacobs, pitching the entire game, led the Nats to a 3-1 victory over their Trenton farmhands in a twilight exhibition contest this afternoon.

The rookie right-hander whose three no-hit performances in the Virginia College League this spring landed him a contract with the Nats held Trenton to four hits in scoring his victory.

Two young Trenton southpaws, who merited seriously appraisal by Manager Buck Harris—Bill Kalfass and Virgil Brown—held the Nats scoreless in eight of the nine innings, giving up only seven hits.

Washington took a 2-0 lead in the fifth inning when Jesse Hill and Walter Millies led off with singles. Trenton scored its lone run in the same inning when Sammy Holbrook, former Washington catcher, tripled to deep right center.

Manager Buck Harris played second base after the second inning when Johnny Mihalic was slightly injured on a slide into third.

Entries Close For 3 Local Links Events

Public links representatives; mixed twosomes and junior golfers, planning to enter their respective events that dot next week's heavy links schedule, have just today and tomorrow to send in entries.

The pay-as-you-play linksmen, who qualify for the city's Harding Cup team play for the muny title as well at East Potomac on Monday and Tuesday, must enter at the downtown layout or Rock Creek by closing time today. Play is for 72 holes.

The Maryland State mixed two ball tournament, on tap Tuesday at Congressional, was the most successful event of its kind ever played in this section last year, and Emmet Gary, association secretary, hopes for a repeat performance.

Entries close with Gary at 16 McClellan place, Baltimore, Md., on Saturday. Several prizes will be awarded for low gross and low net teams. Half the total handicaps will be allowed. A State handicap card must be secured to participate.

An innovation for aspiring young golfers, regardless of club affiliation, is planned Monday at Rolling Road in the first junior open event of the State body. It will be 18 holes medal play, with winner, runner-up and special class prizes awarded. Entries close at 16 McClellan place, Baltimore, at noon Saturday with Emmet Gary. Post entries will not be accepted.

PRETTY PAL gained a slight lead at the close of the first quarter mile, drew away into a good lead and dominating the running to the end, was never threatened. HILDEGARD was prominently placed all the way and continued with good energy to the close. SUGABOOT was far back and in close quarters early, did not obtain clear sailing until the last three furlongs and finished with good energy. CANAVIA disputed the early command with the winner and faltered in the last five-sixteenths. UNFURL closed willingly in the stretch drive. TAKAWALK, forwardly placed early, faltered after reaching the stretch. CRITICAL LADY dropped back steadily after breaking alertly. LOVE POTION never was a threat.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:04. Winner, Mrs. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOOD SOLDIER, $11.60, $6.60, $5.50; SQUAWKER, $5.30, $4.20; HI VIC, $14.80.

GOOD SOLDIER, steadied along back of the pace, began moving to the leaders in the last three furlongs and finishing stoutly in the stretch, wore down SQUAWKER about 30 yards from the finish to draw out steadily. SQUAWKER had speed from the start and opened up a good lead, but was unable to withstand the bid of the winner. HI VIC was forwardly placed all the way and held on willingly in the closing drive. LOLOMA closed some ground, although never able to endanger the leaders. TOANA had good early speed, but faltered after going a half mile. GOOD DAME lacked speed and was far back all the way. MY KIN was unable to close any ground in the drive.

DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $111.90.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:40. Winner, W. S. Kilmer's ch. c. †Willis Sharpe Kilmer entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN IN PLAY, $3.10, $3.20, $2.40; ARMOR BEARER, $4.70, $3.40; FOGGY MORN, $3.10.

SUN IN PLAY drew clear in the first furlong, met determined opposition from ARMOR BEARER all through the entire last quarter mile and outlasted him at the end. ARMOR BEARER, prominent from the outset, made a game bid to reach the winner and fought it out courageously to the end. FOGGY MORN went evenly throughout and barely lasted to save third place from JOCKIDE. The latter, unruly at the post, closed a big gap. GRAND LIGHT was unable to reach the leaders. RIGHT LADY was never prominent. NED'S LADY was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:10. Winner, H. P. Metcalf's ch. g. (3), by Bud Lerner—Indian Queen II. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED NOSE, $11.40, $5.40, $4.20; DYAK, $6.30, $4.70; GAY CREST, $5.90.

RED NOSE, well placed all the way, wore down BONNIE PAN for the lead midway of the turn and holding on with good energy in the final drive, had enough left to hold DYAK safe. The latter worked his way up steadily in the last three furlongs and came with a rush on the outside throughout the stretch. GAY CREST, going improved, met some interference during the early stage and Craig was forced to take up and was hampered greatly after leaving the backstretch and finished with good energy. BALANCE STEP, much used in racing BONNIE PAN into defeat, weakened in the closing drive. BONNIE PAN had good speed for the first half mile, faltering thereafter. BYE BYE MARY was never prominent.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200. The Andover Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:39. Winner, H. P. Metcalf's br. c. (3), by Abbot's Nymph—Big Sally. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:38 2-5, 1:43 1-5.

TEDDY BEAU	(McCombs)	101	3	5	5hd	6hd	7	7	7	8.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH VELOCITY, $24.00, $9.50, $4.40; NATTY BOY, $4.00, $2.60; PALAN, $2.90.

HIGH VELOCITY, prominent all the way, was steadied along when HOLLUSCHICKIE took command and wore the latter down when called upon and drew out in the stretch run. NATTY BOY, well placed and reserved early, fought it out with good energy to the end. PALAN lacked speed to keep pace early and although making up some ground in the last five-sixteenths, never could endanger the first two. ABADDON, a trailer until leaving the backstretch, closed some ground. HOLLUSCHICKIE faltered after going six furlongs. TORCH ROSE tired.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:07½. Winner, M. M. Fish's ch. g. (5), by Upset—Ladora. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $135; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BANK HOLIDAY, $7.80, $4.40, $3.20; COLTMAN, $7.40, $4.30; MAPLE QUEEN, $4.60.

BANK HOLIDAY, steadied along back of the pace, moved up fast on the outside after leaving the backstretch and wearing down the leaders, drew out in the last sixteenth to win. COLTMAN, away slowly, moved around on the outside and closed with good energy. MAPLE QUEEN had speed from the start—was much used in racing with NALITA J. and had nothing left for the closing test. NALITA J. had good speed for the first half mile, faltering in the last quarter mile. JOLLY was never able to reach the lead and displayed a dull effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:38. Winner, Blank's ch. g. (4), by Chance Play—Sable Lady. Trained by P. Clausen. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 1-5, 1:39.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUILDING TRADES, $12.80, $4.10, $3.30; THE BAILIFF, $3.40, $2.80; TELLING YOU, $3.40.

BUILDING TRADES had speed from the start, disposed of BLACK FALCON for the command, opened up a good lead and steadied along in front, had enough in reserve to hold THE BAILIFF safe. The latter moved up steadily on the backstretch and although finishing willingly, was unable to reach the winner. TELLING YOU moved up gradually after reaching the backstretch and finished willingly, getting up in the last strides to take third. BLACK FALCON, well placed, made a determined early bid to go along with the winner, but was not good enough and faltered in the stretch run. EARL PORTER never was prominent. TRAGEDIAN was unable to keep up.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:08. Off at 6:09. Winner, W. W. Haswell's ch. g. (5), by Peter Wrack—Chickadee. Trained by M. Simmons. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12, 1:39 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIPANTUCK, $8.10, $5.40, $3.20; SWIFTLET, $8.60, $4.80; WACOCHE, $2.80.

NIPANTUCK had speed from the start, was rated along under slight restraint and had enough left to stave off the bid of SWIFTLET. The latter, in closest pursuit of the winner for the greater part of the way, was gaining rapidly at the end. WACOCHE moved up gradually and held on well through the stretch, although unable to threaten the first two. PAYRACK, well placed, was unable to improve his position when called upon. KINDRED SPIRIT was never a factor. RAMSHEAD stopped badly.

Dairy Head's Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

The funeral of Henry N. Brawner, 62, president of Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, who died at his summer home in Cape Neddick, Me., Wednesday, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in his residence, 4842 Indian Lane. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

His wife, Mrs. Iola Brawner; his son Edgar N. Brawner, who is vice president of the dairy company, and daughter, Mrs. Sarah Bardoe, returned to Washington last night with the body. Mrs. Brawner was with him when he died, while his son and daughter left Washington Wednesday upon receiving word of his death.

Mr. Brawner was born at Broad Run, Va., and came to Washington with his parents at the age of 17. He entered the dairy business here 45 years ago and developed his firm, the Chestnut Farms Dairy, to its position as the largest milk distributor in the District.

Outside his own business he was prominent in many other firms in the District and was a director of the Norfolk & Washington Steamship Co., the Terminal Refrigerating and Warehouse Corporation and the National Bank of Washington. He was also a member of the Washington Board of Trade.

Mr. Brawner was president of the Rotary Club and was a member of the Congressional Country Club, the Columbia Country Club, the Cathedral Lodge of Masons and St. Alban's Church.

His first wife, Edith M. Brawner, died in Florida in the spring of 1933. Later that year Mr. Brawner married Iola Ludwig.

Boles Gives U. S. Agents Woman's Threat Notes

Los Angeles, July 8 (AP).—Ira Urr, business manager for John Boles, said today he had given Federal postal officials weird letters from a woman demanding $500 from the film singing star.

Urr said the letters were written during four years and the last, received yesterday, demanded payment of that amount under threat of exposing Mrs. Marcelite Boles, the actor's wife, as the head of a narcotic ring. Federal officials declined to comment.

Upsets Mark Women's Net Tournament

The District Women's Singles tournament was thrown into an uproar yesterday at the Columbia Country Club when two unseeded players crashed the semifinals with decisive victories over their first and second seeded opponents.

Mrs. Margaret Robinson, seeded 11, was dropped in straight sets, 6—3, 7—5, by Anne Ellis, slender blonde girl and semifinalist in the Grand National play, while Frances Grimes, dark-haired Morgantown, W. Va., girl and the winner of the Grand National, was the victim of Elinor Finckel's second upset in as many days, in three sets, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3.

Thus Miss Finckel and Miss Ellis are in the round of four with Sarah Moore, defeated finalist in the Grand National, and Edith Clark, who easily won their matches with Mary Ryan and Willie O'Steen. Miss Moore, seeded fourth, received a stiff fight in the first set, which she won, 6—4, but closed out in great style in the second, 6—2. Miss Clark, second choice, exhibited rare form, easily besting Miss Ryan, 6—0, 6—1.

The semifinals at 4 p. m. today find Miss Ellis meeting Miss Moore and Miss Clark engaging Miss Finckel. An Ellis victory would be doubly coveted, for she was the victim of Miss Moore in the semifinals of the Grand National tournament.

In third-round matches yesterday Miss Moore defeated Marion Pritchard, though extended, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2; Miss Ryan defeated Gertrude Smith, 6—1, 6—3.

In first-round doubles, Miss Vest and Miss Owen won from the Athey sisters, 6—4, 7—5, and Miss Grimes and Miss Moore won over Miss Claflin and Miss Smith, 6—1, 6—3.

Yesterday's complete results and today's pairings follow:

Ft. Myer Units Feature Horse Show Tonight

More than 100 entries will show in the seven classes scheduled for hunters, jumpers and riding school hacks on the outdoor horse show to be held in the Jamboree Arena on the Monument Grounds tonight at 7:30.

Some 36 1,000-watt lamps will be concentrated on the jumps so that spectators in all sections of the stands will be assured of a good view of the activities. An added attraction will be the exhibition by the units of the Third United States Cavalry at Fort Myer. Troop E will stage the famous "musical drill," in which 24 men execute intricate drills at a gallop with band accompaniment. Troop F will present a rodeo show.

Tickets may be purchased at the various booths at the arena. They are scaled at 25, 50 cents and $1.

The program:

Class 1, riding school hacks, conformation to be considered, except that horses must show evidence of proper care, feeding and treatment. Class 2, handicap jumping. Class 3, open hunters. To be shown over course of four jumps not to exceed 4 feet, except 3-year-olds to jump 3½ feet. Twice around. Class 4, exhibition by exhibition units of the Third U. S. Cavalry at Fort Myer. Class 5, knockdown and out. To be shown over post and rail jumps, one on each side of the ring, the first jump to be at 4 feet, the second at 4½ feet. In case of ties, each jump to be raised 6 inches. Only refusals and knockdowns to eliminate. Class 6, hunter hacks, to be shown at a walk, trot and canter. Class 7, open jumping. Jumps not to exceed 4 feet. Class 8, working hunters, open to all hunters, but designed for horses that will give the most pleasant and safe ride to hounds.

Local Paddle Tennis Star Tops N.Y. Foe

James Mulvihill, senior champion in the paddle tennis tournament conducted here by the Department of Playgrounds and the Boys Clubs, yesterday defeated Sunny Ilardi, New York senior winner, for the right to compete in the national championships next week. Mulvihill was given a desperate battle to take the first set but finally triumphed by the scores of 11—9, 6—4, 6—4.

The Washington junior titlist Paul Saporium was not so fortunate, however, bowing to New York's junior star, Seymour Birnbaum, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—3. Both matches were played on the Twin Oaks Playground courts.

The first set of the senior match was the most biterly contested of the afternoon, Ilardi's fine net play contrasting with he local lad's superior service and back-court play. Mulvihill finally broke through Ilardi's service in the ninteenth game and continued on to hold his own for the victory.

Harry Heffner In Finals of Junior Play

By the United Press.

Wilmington, Del., July 8.—Harry Heffner, of Washington, D. C., and William Gillespie, of Atlanta, Ga., seeded first and second, reached the finals of the Delaware State junior tennis championships at the duPont Country Club late today.

Heffner defeated David Johnsen, also of Washington, 6—0, 8—6, and Gillespie triumphed over William Turner, Chevy Chase, Md., 6—3, 6—4.

In the quarter-final round today, Heffner routed James J. Logue, Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—0, while Gillespie defeated Bernard Blankin, Washington, 6—1, 6—4. Johnsen routed Harold Hirsh, Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—3, and Turner defeated Robert C. Dunn, Lower Merion, Pa., 6—1, 6—4.

Two Upper Darby, Pa., High School youths will meet for the State boys' title tomorrow. Moylan Hull scored a 7—5, 6—4 victory over Maurice Cowan, Washington, and William Vogt defeated the first-seeded star, Earl Bartlett, of New Orleans, 7—5, 3—6, 6—3, in the semifinals.

Blatch Kayoed By Armstrong In Brief Bout

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—Henry Armstrong, the brown streak from the Pacific Coast, celebrated his third Eastern appearance tonight with a three-round knockout of Alf Blatch, rugged Australian lightweight, before a crowd of 10,000 in Madison Square Garden. Armstrong weighed 132½ and Blatch 3 pounds more.

Armstrong put on the finishing touch with a short right to the head after 1:21 of the third round. Previously he had flattened the boy from "down under" six times in the abbreviated brawl. Blatch was flat on his back when Referee Billy Cavanaugh decided he had had enough.

Post Notes on Fishin' . . . . By Bill Ackerman

ACKERMAN

Solomons Island, Md., July 8.—The squalls that spoiled so many fishing parties over the past weekend are well out of the local solunar system, and while it is rash to make predictions about the the weather several days in advance, it is almost impossible to believe that there could be any more left to mar the next three or four days.

It was not until late Tuesday at Solomons that the catches started to regain, even partially, some semblance to those of the preceding week, as the boats come in with 25 to 40 fine hardheads and a weak or two scattered through most of them. For this fishing there is no hesitation in saying—go to Solomons.

One can have little idea of the number of fishing parties that come down to this little island town until they lay off Capt. Joe Lore's dock, as we have been doing for the past several days. Even through the week they start drifting in from 8 o'clock on for the day fishing, and as evening comes close, with more regularity, for the evening and night fishing.

An inspection of the Lore fleet leaves no doubt as to why their boats are always busy. Large, clean and able, with captains who are capable and know their fishing grounds. There need be no hesitation in making up a party of 15, 18 or even 20, for on these fine boats there is plenty of room.

It is impossible for Post Notes to give a real cross section of fishing conditions in general, for during the past week we have been on a jaunt that has carried the Joann into almost all the fishing holes down the Potomac and the mail bag hasn't as yet caught up. It might be that a log of the trip might be interesting.

* * * *

Leaving Washington late last Friday evening, we plowed through mile after mile of the muddiest water it has been in our lot to encounter for many a day, and it was not until well below Liverpool Point that it was left behind. Safe to say that many days will pass before there will be any good bass fishing in the river above Washington.

Eight thirty, with Maryland Point Light under our stern, it was almost another hour against a strong flood tide before Mathias Point and the bell buoy was passed to head into the teeth of a fresh southeast breeze that made laying at the ferry dock at Morgantown impossible. Heading out again for the 6-mile stretch over to Colonial Beach. Joann was laid alongside the fishing pier shortly after midnight.

* * * *

A little chin-chin next morning with our old captain friends decided against trying any fishing here. Two small rock and a few hardheads seem to be the sum total for this season's catches. Another week or two and it will probably be another story and a good place to try. With little idea that the breeze would sharpen so smartly, breakfast was supposed to be acquired on the way down, but when the guards won't keep the pans where they belong, we do the next best thing and head up the Wicomico, where Cobb Point Bar smoothed the water enough to get the inner man satisfied and find from the few boats running crab lines that there was little here to stop for.

Noon finds us trying and finding indifferent luck on the oyster beds just above Tall Timbers. Tiny hardheads didn't discourage anyone until late afternoon, when Capt. Spriggs came by to show us how the rock are wont to rise early in the evening. They did, and how!

Far larger shoals have been encountered during the years the sport has been followed, but never have we seen larger fish. The "mate" was first in with one that pushed 8 pounds closely, and it wasn't long after that our old fishing buddy, Rudy Wilson, who has been followed by the most persistent fishing jinx, had one the same size on a 5-ounce tip. The fun he had, so he says, amply repaid for the lean years. Fifteen for the evening, running from 2 to 8 pounds.

It finally came, as most things do when you wait long enough, but with it rain squalls and so many boats that as fast as a shoal would rise the boats would drive them down. Few were caught by anyone; we drew an absolute blank, and, in addition, a nasty run back under the Point and a bad two hours on a lee shore. After midnight it calmed enough to get a little sleep until daylight, when anchor was upped and the short 10-mile run to Smiths Creek was made, and everyone turned in for the lost sleep of the night before.

A report from Capt. Bob Lee at Shadyside shows that the great shoal of rock that are lying in the area from "Niggerhead" to Bloody Point are rising regularly, but that few are being caught.

Chesapeake Corp. to Absorb The Alleghany

Step Toward Control of Van Sweringen Rail Empire by Single Unit.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—Plans for gathering control of the Van Sweringen rail empire into a single holding company were advanced today with approval of a proposal for consolidation of the two top units of the structure. Directors of Alleghany Corporation and its subsidiary, Chesapeake Corporation, unanimously indorsed merger of the former into the latter and recommended to stockholders they accept the plan at special meeting to be held August 17.

The three youthful rail barons, Robert R. Young, Frank F. Kolbe and Allan P. Kirby, who in a surprise move last May acquired control of Alleghany and, with working direction of 28,000 miles of railroad lines, intend eventually to dissolve Chesapeake Corporation, Young said. The three, if the present plan is accepted, will hold about 43 per cent of the stock of the new Chesapeake Corporation.

"I want when I quit," Young recently told a Senate committee, "to leave behind me a great consolidated Chsapeake & Ohio system."

Chesapeake Corporation now owns about 35.5 per cent of the common stock of Chesapeake & Ohio. Other roads under working control of Chesapeake Corporation and Alleghany Corporation include the Missouri Pacific, Pere Marquette, Erie, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, "Nickel Plate," Wheeling & Lake Erie and the Pittston Co., the latter operating coal properties.

Exchange of Stock.

The merger plan contemplates exchange of common and preferred stock of Alleghany Corporation and also, of three bond issues outstanding into various classes of stock in the new organization. Holders of the capital stock of Chesapeake Corporation have the choice of exchanging for stock in the new company, or taking common shares in the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway at the ratio of 1½ shares for each one now held.

In their prepared statement, Young, Kolbe and Kirby pointed out that with the merger, if it is effected, 19 holding and miscellaneous nonrailroad companies will have been eliminated since they assumed control.

"In accomplishing this," the statement said, "the management is voluntarily offering to relinquish control of more than three-quarters of a million shares of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway common stock which the proposed plan for the first time makes available to thousands of investors. In addition, warrants to buy more than one and one-quarter million shares in the new company will be distributed among thousands of preferred stockholders, which will ultimately operate to reduce the percentage of voting control now resting in Messrs. Young, Kirby and Kolbe.

"Conversion privileges have also been granted which in time should still further broaden the base of common stock holdings to the point of reducing the interest of the above group to less than 10 per cent of the stock of the new Chesapeake Corporation as contrasted with their present 43 per cent interest. It is believed that this process can be accomplished with full justice to every class of security holder."

The board said its holdings of Treasury bills increased $5,000,000 during the week ended July 7, but that this was offset by a decrease of $5,000,000 in Treasury notes. Aggregate holdings of Government securities remained unchanged at $2,562,000 or $96,000,000 over the same week last year. Money in circulation rose $76,000,000 to $6,524,000,000, or $282,000,000 over the same week last year.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

New York, July 8.

Firm prices for bonds from the Government list down, steadiness in the foreign exchanges, a good tone in commodities and irregularly higher prices in stocks were considered a good hot weather performance for financial markets. Stocks held to a narrow path with fractional price changes and the turnover was around 1,000,000 shares, the smallest of the week. September wheat closed ⅝ of a cent higher at 125⅝ cents a bushel.

Midweek trade statistics are favorable, considering the season and the strikes. The Iron Age concludes that the result of the independent steel company labor difficulties has resulted in the defeat of the C. I. O. and opened the way for a return to normal operations. The strikes, the journal estimates, caused a fall of 19 per cent in steel ingot output in June and prevented what would have been a record production for the half-year period. Prices are hardening.

Electrical output last week fell slightly from the previous week, but was 10 per cent above a year ago. Railroad freight carloadings last week reached a new top for the year and were well above last year. Motor sales, as indicated by the General Motors report, are undergoing a seasonal decline, but retail trade in general seems to be holding well, although reported gains are partly the result of higher prices. Farm products are increasing price enough to warrant larger rural purchasing in the next several months.

Retail Trade.

Retail trade in June, although slackening somewhat from the preceding month, continued at a fair rate above a year ago. The Sun estimates that sales of the first ten fixed price chain stores was 3.7 per cent higher than June last year, but declined 2.2 per cent from May. In the first six months of the current year sales of eight of these concerns were 7.3 per cent better than the corresponding months of 1936.

Consideration of the factors which govern securities prices comes as a reminder that just five years ago, today, according to The Post's compilation of average prices, the stock market touched bottom for the depression. That day happened to be the date of announcement of the Lausanne agreement on German reparations and was the point from which general world trade slowly began to revive.

A study of prices for 25 representative industrial stoocks shows gains from the lows of July 8, 1932, to yesterday's close ranged from 13¾ points for Socony-Vacuum to 184½ points in Allied Chemical. Seven of the stocks have risen more than 100 points each. The average price of $14 a share in 1932 compares with $90 a share today. The Post's average for 20 industrial stocks has advanced 261 per cent. In several cases more money is now being paid on stocks in the form of dividends than the shares were selling for in 1932. Chrysler, which was offered for $5 a share then, received $12 a share in dividends last year. Montgomery Ward, which went for $4 a share in the depression, has received $4.40 in dividends this year.

Railroad Lows.

Railroad shares reached their depression lows on the same day as the industrials. The Post's averages to yesterday's close show a gain of 353 per cent. Norfolk & Western leads with a rise of 180 points. Union Pacific recovered more than 100 points. Delaware & Hudson, while now only 8 points above its 1932 low, sold down to 23½ in 1935.

Publis utility shares have fared differently. Current prices in most cases are above those of 1932, but the gains are nowhere near those of other stocks divisions. Utilities had the worst time in 1935 and prices reached the low points on March 14 of that year—the worst in their history—under the bludgeoning of the Administration.

Stock leaders today backed and filled. Steel held higher than its best yesterday, but most of the time rocked along around 107. A little spurt took place in the early trading, after which the market was inclined to dullness and softness, but the idea of recovery was held. Most of the rails receded a bit. Exceptions were Central and Santa Fe, Chesapeake Corporation and the Alleghanies were strong.

Telephone and Western Union slipped back a point each. Eddies and North Americans found favor. Motors were a droopy section, although Chrysler recovered most of its early loss. Montgomery Ward continued to advance. Elsewhere no changes took place.

Automobile Sales.

New passenger automobile sales in the fifth, or local, Federal Reserve District, in May and for the first five months of the current year, made gains over the corresponding periods last year, the latest review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va., reveals. In Washington, however, they did not touch last year's figures. Number of new cars registered in the entire district in May was 25,795, or 3.2 per cent above that of a year ago, and in the five-months period, 109,530, or 15.9 per cent over the similar 1936 period.

New cars registered in this city in May amounted to 3,179, a decline of 13.3 per cent from the number of May a year ago, and the five months' total of 14,868 was a drop of 9.8 per

Bendix Lets Contracts For 'Aviation City'

New York, July 8 (AP).—Bendix Aviation Corporation's $3,000,000 "Aviation City" project at Teterboro, N. J., got under way today when Vincent Bendix, president, announced contracts for the completion of ten buildings had been awarded to the Turner Construction Co. Work will be started immediately, he stated.

Construction will start shortly on a new Eastern service plant for inland manufacturing division of Clark Township, near Cranford, N. J., it was announced today. The New Jersey plant, sixth manufacturing unit of General Motors in the State, will cover 100,000 square feet of floor space and will employ 200 to 300 workers.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 8.—Speculative interest was well maintained in today's stock market as activity increased and sentiment became more cheerful. Steel and shipping shares were in demand and mining and transatlantic securities sold higher. Home rails were strong on the belief that the roads would obtain a 5 per cent increase in rates. Gilt-edged shares and foreign bonds held steady.

Paris—Price movements were mixed at the close of the bourse today, industrials and government bonds moving up sharply. Rentes finished with net gains ranging from 85 to 150 centimes and Bank of France stock advanced 170 francs. Royal Dutch and Suez Canal finished lower.

Liverpool—Wheat futures closed 1½d to 1¾d net higher on the extremely low private condition report and the strength in the Winnipeg market. Weather forecasts were for continued dry weather in the northwest. Cotton futures closed 9 to 11 points net higher, rallying sharply following the announcement of the U. S. Government acreage report. Prior to the issuance of the report the market was lower on continental selling and evening up of commitments.

Wheat Reacts After Rising 3¼c a Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 8.—Stirred by persistently sensational reports of drought damage to Canadian crops, Chicago wheat prices ran up 3¼ cents a bushel today, but sharply reacted afterward. Record-breaking big recepits of newly harvested domestic wheat more than offset here at times the market effect of Canadian crop damage.

Export business in Canadian wheat came to life today, and reached the largest total witnessed for weeks past, 1,500,000 bushels destined mostly to great Britain.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ to 1¼ cents above yesterday's finish; July, 1.24⅛@1.24¼; September, 1.25⅝@1.25⅞; December, 1.27⅛@1.27¾. Corn, ⅝ to 2¾ up; July, 1.28¾; September, 1.15½@1.15¾; December, 85½@85⅝. Oats unchanged to ⅛ higher; September, 39⅜, and rye unchanged to ½ advance; September, 90½. Rules of Senate Raised in Fight Over Court Bill

"I do not know anybody on this floor who violates that rule more than does the Senator from Arkansas," said Wheeler.

"I never violate any rule when I am required to conform to it," returned Robinson, but was admonished by Johnson he was then violating the rule.

"If he may deliver a speech in the time of the Senator from Kentucky," said Johnson, "the rest of us can do the same thing, and that may be understood right now."

Here Logan repeated that he meant no offense, but thought Wheeler's position on the court bill put him in "bad company."

Pittman warned Logan a speaker is personally responsible in yielding to another, and if a question has not been asked him, the chair will rule he has lost the floor. The chair did not technically rule on the "two speeches" injunction, but announced it was prepared to do so.

Duel Subsides.

The parliamentary duel subsided somewhat in the late afternoon when Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, took the floor to charge "usurpation" of legislative power by the Supreme Court, and to call on Congress to remedy what he called an "abuse."

Some questions he answered, some he refused to yield for. Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, shot a parting shaft as Minton prepared to sit down—"Is the Senator going to conclude without discussing the bill?"

Senator Francis T. Maloney, of Connecticut, wanted to know if Minton would be content with the law of Justices Brandeis, Cardozo and Stone, and the Indianan said he would if their present line of opinions continued.

"Then how would the Senator feel if he thought these three judges were opposed to this bill?" asked Maloney.

"That old age was approaching them," said Minton.

Logan had been so closely besigned by Sentaor O'Mahoney and Senator Burke, of Nebraska, that majority whip followed Robinson in an appeal to the chair.

Burke asked if Logan could "conceive of no distinction between the spirit and letter of the Constitution," and Logan replied "there can be no distinction."

O'Mahoney Follows Up.

Following this up, O'Mahoney asked if Congress could withhold appropriations from the two other branches of Government, and "by so doing, strike down the other two branches."

"Would that be within the spirit of the Constitution?" asked O'Mahoney.

"Anything that is permitted by the Constitution the Congress may do, and it would be within the spirit of the Constitution," Logan replied.

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, asked Logan:

"As I understand the Senator, it was the hope that through these appointments there could be effectuated such a change of view upon the part of the court as a whole that it would bring about a construction of the Constitution which would admit the validity of these matters of legislation which had been declared void?"

Plan Continuous Amendments.

"That is as well stated as I could state it myself," replied Logan.

During the day, Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, publicly committed himself against the compromise bill. Nearly 20 Senators remain uncommitted, and from these opponents hope to glean further support. They now claim 44 votes.

Opponents plan to combat the "two speeches on any one question" rule by continuously offering amendments. This would indefinitely forestall an end to debate by permitting speeches on each amendment.

Cancer Session Hears Experts Back Federal Aid Bill

Post Staff Photos.

Chautemps Faces Near Impossible Job of Boosting Revenues On Top of Staggering Debt to Bolster Social Reform Program

Put into American currency, at today's rate of exchange, this means a probable deficit for the current year of about $1,750,000,000. That indicates an expenditure during 1937 by the French government of almost $2 for every $1 of income. And this deficit is being piled on a public debt which already totals about $25,000,000,000, entirely excluding the $10,000,000,000 or more of war debts owing to the United States and Great Britain.

MANY FORECAST THIRD DEVALUATION.

It is to be emphasized that the dollar comparisons are based on the exchange rates of the day of writing. Before this can be printed the franc will in all probability have dropped at least to the lowest limit authorized under the devaluation act of last September. And many informed observers think that to achieve permanent financial stability the franc will have to be devalued again, for the third time since the war, to a level well below the present exchange value of 4.5 cents.

There has been a good deal of discussion, in connection with President Roosevelt's deficit financing, of the extent to which this procedure can be carried on without precipitating disaster. Of course there is no definite answer. It depends partly on the degree to which people can be hoodwinked regarding the value of their currency and the credit of their government. But in France the safety limit has been far exceeded. Under the Blum regime the flight from the franc assumed literally panic proportions.

It has been asserted that only the wealthy in France have lost confidence in their currency, and have tried to hedge against further devaluation by turning francs into foreign currencies and securities. Investigation of the movement of deposits in savings banks indicates, to the contrary, that persons of very moderate means have pursued exactly the same course.

In 1935, the total of savings deposits in French banks decreased by 20,000,000 francs. In 1936 the net loss soared to 5,037,000,000 francs. In June, of last year, the month in which the social reform program was inaugurated, withdrawals from savings accounts exceeded deposits by over 1,000,000,000 francs, making an average loss per day far in excess of the total net loss in the preceding year.

In Geneva the cashier of an important bank told me that the influx of funds from France has this year constituted the principal business of his institution. In that Swiss city blocks of apartments are now being erected with French money seeking secure investment. Other streams of outgoing capital have been directed to Belgium, Holland, Great Britain and the United States.

The reverse side of the picture is shown by the French banks, now drained of their reserves and with money of their clients, small as well as large, carrying part of their accounts in foreign currencies. Very ominous is the increasing difficulty experienced by the government in borrowing money for its current obligations on any terms.

It is not the social reform program itself which created this situation, but the fact that this program was imposed at a time when the existing burden of governmental debt was being augmented by huge rearmament expenditures. The Blum program has precipitated the present crisis because it has operated to reduce national income and increase national debt at a time when budgetary balance was essential. As the canny French have recognized the long-range impossibility of this contradiction they have transferred their convertible wealth into foreign assets, thus speeding up the fiscal degeneration.

Viewed in retrospect, it is easy to see why the outcome has been as described. On the industrial side the Blum program has embodied five main social reforms: (1) establishment of the 40-hour week; (2) simultaneous wage increases averaging 12 per cent for all organized labor; (3) two weeks vacation with pay for all employes, made effective last summer without any time for preliminary preparation; (4) collective bargaining between employers and representatives of the C. G. T.; (5) compulsory arbitration of certain classes of disputes to assure that contracts resulting from collective bargaining are observed.

There were, of course, other aspects of M. Blum's "New Deal." There is the reform of the Bank of France, described in yesterday's article. There is a far-reaching scheme of agricultural price-fixing and marketing control. There is a broad extension of the social insurance coverage and an extensive plan of public works to be put into operation after completion of the badly-delayed Paris Exposition. But from the viewpoint of national economy as a whole the vital changes have been those noted above.

TO SOME EXTENT FORCED ON BLUM.

As pointed out in yesterday's article, this five-point program of industrial transformation was to some extent forced upon Premier Blum. That was the general objective of the wave of sit-down strikes which brought French employers to the verge of jitters during the month before M. Blum took office.

The program was in fact approved by the famous Matignon agreements between the C. G. T. and the employers' organizations, on June 7, 1936, before the introduction of the legislation which has since then made the reforms legally binding. But the Socialist Premier accepted the situation joyfully. He presided over the making of the Matignon agreements, and he pledged himself to make them the law of the land as soon as possible.

The economic argument behind the Blum program was, of course, that same "purchasing power theory" with which Americans have become so familiar since 1932. The Popular Front government has consistently argued that higher wages mean greater purchasing power; that greater purchasing power means increased consumption; that increased consumption means increased production, augmenting the national income, yielding additional revenues for the state and thus eliminating the chronic budgetary deficits which have so greatly impeded French recovery from the depression.

Maybe it would all work out that way in time. But the objective reporter must confine himself to the fact that it has certainly not done so yet and that the failure is the primary reason for the resignation of Premier Blum.

Reduced to essentials, the flaw in the argument is that higher wages have not meant greater purchasing power. The official index of retail prices in Paris, based on 34 commodities essential to a wage-earner's budget, rose by nearly 28 per cent between May, 1936, and May, 1937. This, as the workers are resentfully beginning to realize, makes the nominal 12 per cent wage increase achieved a year ago seem ridiculous. Further decline of the franc will, of course, emphasize the futility of wage increases which cannot overtake soaring prices.

Moreover, the disorganization attendant upon the rapid establishment of the 40-hour week, in general replacing a 48-hour standard, has been terrific. In several industries it has definitely retarded production, thus upsetting the purchasing power theory at another point, and it has greatly increased costs.

Introduction of this part of the program on the railroads, for instance, is largely responsible for the carriers' estimated 1937 deficit of 7,000,000,000 francs. This is an unprecedented loss which the government must assume and which at present it simply does not know how to meet.

40-HOUR WEEK HELPED SOME.

Of course the 40-hour week has improved the unemployment situation, though this has never been very serious in France. The number of wholly unemployed in receipt of benefit is now only 340,000, representing a drop of 18 per cent from a year ago. And the index of industrial production, as a whole, after falling sharply last summer, is now slowly rising, standing at 105 (1913 equals 100), as against 102 when Premier Blum assumed office. But the social reform program will not be workable unless financial stability can be restored in a way to bring back the capital which has fled the country.

To restore that stability is the essential task of Premier Chautemps and Finance Minister Bonnet. The only way in which it can be restored will be by a whole-hearted co-operation of the French people in a curtailment of expenditures, enabling the country to live within its income.

For France, at least, the fool's paradise of deficit financing is played out. In every section of the population a morning-after feeling is apparent. It is quite possible that, confronted with the overwhelming financial emergency, political lines will now begin to shift as they have shifted in the past.

Communists as well as Conservatives desire a strong France. It is obvious here that the sine qua non of national strength is a drastic and rigorous economy program. And France is pacifist today at least partly because her people realize that the present scale of armament expenditure threatens the successful achievement of social reform.

In the first of these three articles on the present French crisis it was asserted that the internal stability of that country is of very much more than purely domestic concern. Prospects of world peace depend substantially on whether the French can check their present downward slide, eliminate internal dissensions and produce a government which will maintain the support of the wage earners without alienating the good will of those who have had such good reason to fear that their savings are unsafe.

To accomplish this end will demand that mutuality of sacrifice which the French, in the face of great national emergency, have always heretofore achieved. Such sacrifice is demanded today as clearly as was ever the case in crises of the past. And if fraternity is lacking in this time of test neither liberty nor equality is likely to remain long in France.

Brokers' Loans Drop $20,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $1,207,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $20,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $960,000,000.

witnesses to erection of the hospital—on grounds that the Government already has private hospital facilities at its disposal and that private hospitals would be quick to take advantage of all laboratory findings, thus eliminating the need for further "treatment testing ground at present."

"Government money spent for cancer right now might do a great deal of good and I do not believe that it would discourage private gifts."

"Endless cures for cancer are offered the American public. I test hundreds of them in my own laboratory. I can think of no better way you could spend money than to provide an institute in which all the quacks and pretenders could be brought to test."

Dr. C. C. Little, director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer—who opened and closed the testimony—likewise stressed the need for a national cancer cure "testing ground."

"For the Government to spend a big sum of money now to aid cancer study would put new spirit into the research workers and be of tremendous psychological benefit to the American people," he said.

Dr. B. T. Simpson, of the New York Institute for the Study of Malignant Disease, stressed the shortage of radium for cancer treatment.

Dr. Simpson said that he is successfully running a small hospital such as the Maverick bill suggests. "We are overwhelmed by patients. I consider hospital facilities a necessary part of cancer research; however, I consider the radium need greater.

"I think the Government should buy at least 10 grams. Radium is now selling at $20,000 a gram. You probably never have considered the question, but many of the 48 States do not have any radium at all and I know of one State in which there is no high powered X-ray machine that could be used for cancer treatment."

Dr. Parran outlined a six-point program, which he said included the major needs in the cancer field. They were: 1, Continuation and extension of services of the Public Health Service in the field of cancer research. 2, Establishment of a central repository of cancer information, where scientists could pool their information and check their research efforts against others. 3, Co-operation with the States in the control of cancer. 4, Promotion of facilities for radiation treatment of cancer. 5, A supply of radium which could be lent to approved treatment centers, which could be established in the several States if needed. 6, Construction and operation of a model cancer treatment center for beneficiaries of the Federal Government.

Others appearing before the committees were: Sir Lenthal Cheatle, noted English surgeon; Dr. Max Cutler, of the Michael Rice Hospital, Chicago; Dr. H. C. Connell, Hendry-Connell Research Foundation, Ontario, Canada; Dr. Temple Fay, of the Temple University Unit of the International Cancer Research Foundation; Dr. Warren points in that length of time. At the Lewis, Carnegie Institute; Dr. Mefle Tuve, Carnegie Institute; Dr. Dud- Institute of Health; Dr. Ludvig Hektone, University of Chicago, and Dr. Giocchino Failla, Marine Biological Laboratory.
